BOMB HUNT — Working during low tide, a crew of Army and Navy ordnance experts tags bombs (arrows) mired in a long-forgotten target range off Hamilton Air Force Base. The crew, which began work yesterday, is tagging all bombs, both live and practice, with floating devices so they can be removed by boats later at high tides. Many of the dark objects poking out of the mud are flotsam, although some are bombs.

Total U.S. Troop Pullback May Be Set Tonight

Nixon 'Lock, Stock, Barrel' Vow Depends On Reds' POW Reaction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is expected to announce in a national television appearance tonight that he stands willing to set a specific date for full withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam once the Communists agree to free American prisoners of war.

Shortly after a high administration official disclosed the President's intention, the White House arranged network television and radio time for Nixon at 5:30 p.m. PST.

The new U.S. proposal is expected to be presented formally to North Vietnamese and Viet Cong negotiators at the stalled Paris peace sessions on Thursday.

Nixon's press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, said the President would speak to the nation from his oval office.

Ziegler refused to characterize the nature of the speech beyond saying it would be "a major foreign policy announcement."

Ziegler told reporters, "I would move with some caution as to what you say in your reports prior to the President's statement tonight." But high administration officials said Nixon was prepared to signal the Communists a willingness to set a withdrawal date, contingent on release of POWs.

Of the prospects of success of the President's bid, the Nixon Administration apparently has no firm idea as to how Hanoi and the Viet Cong might react.

It is considered virtually certain they would initially attempt to squeeze further concessions out of the United States, possibly demanding evacuation of American air bases in Thailand and elsewhere in Southeast Asia.

However, such attempts at further bargaining on their part would —in the view of U.S. officials —cost them considerable in international support.

A spokesman for the Viet Cong delegation said today in Paris the war could end only after Nixon pulled out all U.S. troops and also halted support for the Saigon regime of President Nguyen Van Thieu. The spokesman, Ly Van Sau, said the Viet Cong would continue to demand both points be met before peace could come.

On the domestic political front, Nixon would have virtually made good on his claim that the war would not offer his Democratic opposition any real political ammunition in this year's presidential campaigning.

It was considered possible that the President might insist as a condition for his withdrawal pledge that the Communists drastically reduce their military activity in South Vietnam which has mounted in recent weeks and might presage a major offensive just before or around the time of

Another Enters Race In Novato

A sixth candiate filed for the Novato City Council today, and other candidates filed to get on to the April 11 municipal election ballots in Sausalito and Larkspur.

A Cotati man, meanwhile, announced his candidacy for the council in that Southern Sonoma city.

John N. Morrison, 31, of 1 Palmo Court, said he filed for the Novato council because of a belief that special interest groups and organized factions had received all the council's attention at the expense of the "average citizen."

"I'm not against any of these organizations per se, but I feel the need to represent the people" who are not organized, Morrison said.

He said he plans a door-to-door campaign aimed at talking with at least 5,000 Novato residents about problems they see in the city.

Morrison is self-employed, operating a capital investment office with mining and exploration interests in Canada and the Western United States.

He moved to Novato five years ago with his wife, Eileen, after serving three years in Germany in the Army Engineers. The Morrisons have two preschool children. Morrison was graduated from Arizona State College at Tempe with degrees in engineering and business administration.

In Sausalito, Councilman Robin Sweeny filed for reelection, and businessman Chadd Howard filed as a challenger for one of the three seats open.

Mrs. Sweeny first was elected to the council in 1968. She is a registered nurse, and lives at 173 San Carlos Avenue with her husband, John, and their two children.

Howard, 60, lives at 77 Central Avenue, and is an insurance adjuster. He has been a Sausalito resident for 26 years. He is a past master of the Marin Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons.

Howard and his wife, Jane, have a daughter.

Robert H. Lee, chairman of the Larkspur Planning Commission, filed for council candidacy today with a charge that present councilmen "fail to ac-

Bid Made To Keep Senate Remap Alive

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SACRAMENTO — An unexpected last minute bid to reapportion the state Senate in time for this year's elections was launced today.

An immediate effect of the bid, if it succeeds, will be to force Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, to re-start the campaign engine he so happily shut down last Tuesday after the state Supreme Court killed a Senate reapportionment plan that also had been vetoed by the governor.

The sudden move to try again to reapportion the upper house came to light late this morning in a memorandum to Republican senators from Sen. John L. Harmer of Glendale, GOP caucus chairman. Harmer, announcing a caucus meeting for this afternoon, appealed to all Republicans to back a slightly revised version of the bill killed by the court.

That bill would extend Behr's district from Marin through Western San Francisco and into San Mateo County, and force him to run two years before his four-year term normally would expire.

Harmer's memorandum explained that he had been "approached by the Democratic leadership" to make another attempt to pass a reapportionment bill. Under the Supreme Court's ruling, the Senate would

DEPUTY DRAWS SURPRISE

Aw(ning)ful Fall As Exit Plan Fails

The best laid plans of mice and frightened office workers still go wrong sometimes.

For example, take the carefully formulated escape plan of a Tiburon publishing firm employee, who had figured out what to do in case she ever got trapped in her office at night by a prowler.

The scheme went wrong yesterday — spectacularly.

Tiburon sheriff's deputies, who declined to identity the 44-year-old woman, said she told them she sometimes works late at Worth Publishers, 1920 Paradise Drive, and spends the night there.

In the event of a prowler, she decided she would crawl out a second story window and down a drainpipe to safety.

She got her first chance to test the scheme at 6 a.m. yesterday when she heard someone enter a rear door and climb a flight of stairs to the second floor.

Deputies said she quickly climbed out a window, but it was the wrong one. It had no drainpipe, so she clung to the ledge until the intruder retreated down the stairs.

She tried to climb back inside, but slipped, bounced off an awning one flight below and landed in some bushes — right at the feet of a startled sheriff's deputy, Larry Stansfield.

He helped her to her feet and explained he had been checking the neighborhood and found the door unlocked. He began a check of the building for prowlers but found it too big to search alone and was walking back to his patrol car when he heard a loud thump on the awning above his head.

Stansfield was about to draw his gun when the woman tumbled into the bushes at his feet.

Deputies said the woman complained of pain in her ankle. She said she would see her own doctor.

BOMB COUNT IN MUDFLATS: 275

Former Air Force Officer Confirms Area Used As Early-Day Target Site

Military weapons teams tagged 275 bombs buried in mudflats near Hamilton Air Force base yesterday and estimated the count may reach 1,500.

Hamilton officials said the majority of the bombs are believed to be sand-filled practice devices with no explosive capability.

The tagging operation, for later removal of the bombs, is expected to continue through tomorrow while tides are favorable, the Air Force said.

When three bombs were retrieved last week, following discovery of the devices by a young boy, one was live, leading to the possibility that some of the bombs might explode.

Meanwhile, a retired Air Force officer shed additional light yesterday on the origin of the devices.

Retired Col. Charles G. Williamson, now living in San Mateo, confirmed that the area was used for bombing practice in the early and mid 1930s.

Williamson, who was in charge of training on a special bomb sight at the base, told Air Force officials that during his stay at the installation from 1934 to 1937, he personally dropped hundreds of bombs aimed at targets set up on tidal flats offshore from Hamilton.

"We actually salvaged some bombs for reuse," he said. "We found that within a week or two after being dropped in 20 feet of mud, some would work their way up to the surface and we would retrieve many of them," Williamson said.

Although no explosive devices were used while he was at Hamilton, Williamson said, he didn't rule out the possibility bombs with charges of four pounds of black powder may have been used after he left the base.

In addition to the tagging operation, bomb disposal teams also have come across the frame of what is believed to be a Martin B-12 bomber that ditched in the area many years ago.

Old Nixon Prof Is Defense Aide

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon Tuesday named Kenneth Rush, his law professor when he attended Duke University and now U.S. ambassador to West Germany, as deputy defense secretary.

Rush, 62, a former president of Union Carbide Corp., succeeds David Packard in the Pentagon's No. 2 post. There was no word on who would succeed Rush in Bonn.

Nixon also named Eberhardt Rechtin, 42, as assistant defense secretary for telecommunications.

Supervisor Baar Won't Seek Reelection; Two Now In Race

By ERIK M. INGRAM

Marin Supervisor Louis H. Baar announced yesterday he will not seek reelection June 6 to his Fourth District seat due to business and personal pressures.

Baar's surprise announcement, which swept through the Civic Center Administration Building like an electric shock, was made following a meeting with his supporters.

As Baar was making his announcement, a women's liberationist and head of an antiabortion group said she plans to run for the vacant seat.

Patricia T. Maginnis, who lives in the Gerstle Park area of San Rafael, said she will run on a platform seeking social reform in such areas as housing, child care and equal employment opportunities for women in county government.

Miss Maginnis, 43, is currently appealing a felony conviction for composing and distributing information on producing abortions.

She is the second announced candidate for Baar's seat. Gary T. Giacomino of Woodacre, a San Rafael attorney, disclosed his intentions in November to run.

A third possible candidate, John F. West, a county planning commissioner, indicated yesterday he also may seek Baar's seat.

"Someone has been spreading rumors that I'm not running and its not me," West told the Independent-Journal.

Miss Maginnis, chairman of the Association to Repeal Abortion Laws, is a 1961 graduate of San Jose State College.

She is employed as a laboratory technologist and has lived in San Rafael for three years.

In addition to the abortion group, she is a mmber of the National Organization for Women (NOW) and heads the Marin chapter's committee for child care.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Rockefeller Seeks Governorship

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Millionaire John D. Rockefeller IV, who came to West Virginia as an antipoverty worker eight years ago and now wants to be its next governor, says he will run on a platform of more jobs for his adopted state and a better life for its coal miners.

Rockefeller

Rockefeller, 34, announced yesterday his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor.

He now is West Virginia secretary of state — a Democrat serving under a Republican administration.

Rockefeller said he would emphasize in his campaign what he believed to be the state's greatest need — more jobs.

Pact Rejected

OTTAWA (UPI) — Air controllers overwhelmingly rejected a tentative agreement late Monday, dimming hopes for a settlement of the strike that has crippled Canada's air traffic for nine days.

The 1,600 members of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association voted 85 per cent against accepting the government's offer, presented early Saturday.

The vote raised the possibility of government intervention, according to official sources who said legislation might be necessary as a last resort to end the walkout.

'Unity Week'

ROME (UPI) — In 1054 A. D., representatives of Pope Leo IX excommunicated the Patriarch of Constantinople and split the Christian church into two branches which never have reunited.

But their differences are diminishing. Pope Paul VI celebrated Christian Unity Week last night by declaring the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches "branches of the same tree and born from the same roots."

"We are all Christians, we are all part of the mystical body of Christ through baptism," the Pontiff said during the service celebrated jointly with Metropolitan Meliton of Chalcedon, personal represntative of the present Patriarch of Constantinople, Athenagoras I.

Soviets Charged

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Criminal charges of violating U.S. fishing waters in the Bering Sea were filed in federal court late yesterday against three Soviet fleet officers.

The Russian officials were flown 600 miles from Adak Island, where their vessels were impounded, to Anchorage, where they appeared in U.S. District Court.

Their arraignment was postponed until Friday and they were released on their own recognizance to the custody of Vice-Consul Albert Androfsev of the Soviet Embassy.

The Russians, Vladmir Artemov, commander of the Bering Sea fleet; Igor Bovtun, and Nickolai Pazluk appeared in the federal courtroom in uniform.

Formal Recognition

DACCA (UPI) — Czechoslovakia today became the latest nation to grant formal recognition to Bangladesh, following within hours similar action by the Soviet Union.

Czechoslovakia was the 19th nation either to grant recognition to the government headed by Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman or announce it would do so in the near future.

Earlier it was announced that Moscow had granted formal recognition — the first big power to do so.

Two Hit By Gunmen

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Gunmen pushed past a 19-year-old factory worker's mother today and seriously wounded her son at his home in Lurgan. In another incident, a Roman Catholic police sergeant was wounded by machinegun fire as he opened his garage.

Police suspected the men who wounded Sgt. Edward Kelly escaped across the border into the Irish Republic.

A volley of machine gun fire wounded Kelly in the arms, head and chest as he opened the door of his garage.

Red Nations Meet

VIENNA (UPI) — East Europe's Communist leaders, led by Russia's Leonid L. Brezhnev, convened in Prague for a Warsaw pact summit today.

Party and government leaders from the member countries of the Warsaw Pact Alliance — the Soviet Union, Poland, East Germany, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria — met for a two-day political consultative meeting on European security in the Prague Hradcany Castle, the news agency CTK said.

Diplomatic sources said recent developments within the Common Market — the acceptance of Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Norway as full members — would be discussed.

Nixon Opposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The AFL-CIO officially announced today it will oppose President Nixon's bid for re-election.

"The AFL-CIO has set as its primary political goal in 1972 the defeat of Richard Nixon's bid for re-election," Alexander E. Barkan, who is in charge of raising and dispensing the federation's political and campaign funds, wrote in the current issue of the AFL-CIO news.

HOLDOUT — Shoichi Yokoi (right), 56, a World War II Japanese Army sergeant, talked yesterday following his capture by hunters in Guam, 28 years after the island fell to American forces. He is shown (left) in a 1941 photograph, dressed in the uniform of the Japanese Army.

Nearly 30 Years As Holdout On Guam Ends For A Japanese

AGANA, Guam (UPI)The Japanese Imperial Army troops who occupied Guam in World War II were under orders never to surrender to the Americans who stormed the Pacific island on July 21, 1944. Sgt. Shoichi Yokoi was faithful to that command for nearly 30 years.

It was a chance meeting in the fading light of dusk with two hunters that managed what the the U.S. 3rd Marine Division Army's 77th Infantry had not accomplished—the capture of Yokoi.

The hunters surprised Yokoi, 56, as he was tending a home-made shrimp trap in the Talofofo River 20 miles outside Agana Monday night.

Yokoi told how he had survived for 28 years in the jungles of Guam on a diet of nuts, breadfruit, mangos, papaya, shrimp, snails, rats and frogs. He drew the line at snakes.

A tailor when he was drafted into the Japanese army in 1941, Yokoi said he weaved a burlap-like cloth from tree bark fiber and fashioned himself trousers and a jacket. He said he used a pair of scissors he carried through the war to tailor the clothes and to cut his hair. He was heavily bearded.

He said he heard of neither the atomic bomb nor television and stared in incredulity when told that a jet plane would return him to his hometown of Nagoya in three hours.

In Tokyo, the Japanese government said it would pay Yokoi's fare to Japan and James Shintaku, honorary Japanese Consulate on the island, said he would make travel arrangements. A spokesman for the Japanese ministry of welfare said there was no doubt the man man on Guam was the same dier reported dead on Sept. 4, 1944.

His family in Japan was notified in September of 1944 that he had been killed in action. Both his parents are dead.

His only surviving relative is Osamau Yokoi, 42, a cousin.

Yokoi said he knew the war was over at least on Guam because of leaflets he found scattered through the jungle. But he held out, fearing he would be executed if he surrendered.

Blizzard-Like Storms Paralyze Upper Midwest

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The upper Midwest was virtually paralyzed today as hurricane force winds whipped snow into blizzard-like conditions across northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Authorities in Minnesota recommended late Monday that no one venture out into the storm that even forced highway road crews into ditches. Hundreds of schools were closed in the state Monday when the first part of the storm struck and thousands of evening events were canceled.

A school bus with 28 children from Lamberton, Minn., was missing for four hours Monday before the driver and children were found safe at a farm home that didn't have a telephone. Many accidents were reported in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area where stalled cars clogged freeways.

Hotels and motels in the upper Midwest were filled with travelers stranded by the storm and gusty winds kept planes grounded.

In Michigan's Upper Peninsula today blizzard warnings were in effect as 50 miles per hour winds blew snow around and reduced visibility to 50 yards at Marquette. In the city of Ishpeming, only about 12 miles north of Marquette, visibility was near zero.

Two teen-age youths who went snowmobiling on Lake Michigan's little Bay de Noc near Gladstone were reported missing by state police.

Radio stations in the upper peninsula remained on the air during the night to broadcast emergency information. Some roads were open, but most were blocked off by the storm. The winds also downed power lines.

High winds combined with near zero temperatures in Chicago this morning to produce a wind chill factor of 60 degrees below zero. Several streets in the city were closed because of falling debris and state officials banned house trailers from the Illinois Tollway late Monday because of the winds, which gusted up to 59 m.p.h.

The Lake Superior storm today pulled frigid air deeply into the nation's midsection, forcing temperatures down to cold wave proportions.

Persian Gulf State Ruler Slain In Palace Gunfight

BAHRAIN (UPI)—The ruler of Sharjah, Sheikh Kahlid Bin Mohammed Al Quasimi, and nine of his relatives were killed today in a palace gun battle and attempted coup, political sources said.

The sources said that shortly afterwards, the former ruler and the Sheikh's cousin, Sheikh Saquir Bin Sultan—who led the unsuccessful takeover—surrendered to loyalist troops which surrounded the building in the tiny Persian Gulf state.

Saquir, who was ousted in a bloodless palace coup six years ago, apparently had returned to the country from Cairo to lead the surprise attack, they said.

The fighting broke out Monday afternoon when the rebels broke into the palace and took Quasimi hostage.

Sharjah is one of the six former trucial states in the Persian Gulf which banded together to become the Union of Arab Emirates in December. Both Sharjah and Bahrain, a string of islands forming an archipelago in the Persian Gulf, are rich in oil deposits.

Iran reacted to this merger by taking over the islands of the two Tumbs and Abu Musa owned by Sharjah with its military forces and agreeing to share them with the sheikh.

Political observers in Beirut said Libya and Iraq, angered at the Iranian takeover of the islands, may have given financial and material support to Sheikh Saquir for the coup attempt.

Shaheen Is Firm: Will Not Quit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Given a choice to quit or be fired, San Francisco School Superintendent Thomas A. Shaheen has refused to do either.

The ultimatum was issued by the Board of Education Sunday night at a closed-door session which Shaheen attended briefly. He walked out within five minutes saying he would not resign, but planned instead to fulfill his contract, which has 2½ years to run at a salary of $42,000 a year.

Shaheen, under fire for his administration of the city's integrated elementary school program, was defended by a group called Teachers for Shaheen, which charged Monday night that "the lack of specific charges against Sheheen points to an antagonism toward him by people who resent his attempts to combat racism."

DUCKING FROM THE RAIN?

16 Units Slashed From Development

A development plan for the second phase of the Harbor Point apartment project in Strawberry was approved yesterday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

Approval came, however, only after the commission had slashed the development's density form 160 units to 144. The action brought assurances from developer Vladimir J. Turski of Mill Valley that he would appeal to the board of supervisors.

The commission, in reducing the number of units, said the action was necessary to insure public access to Richardson Bay.

Cut from Turski's master plan was a block section of 16 townhouses which would have been located on the shoreline and which opponents to the plan said would have prevented the public from using the bay.

Turski labeled the action an infringement on his "vested rights" since the first phase of the development — which included recreational facilities for the second phase — was based on 160 units, not 154. Further, he said, the new development plan is identical to his master plan approved in 1968.

He questioned what authority the commission had to make the reduction and was told the recently approved tidal waterways ordinance prohibited development contrary to the "public benefit" — in this case the right of access to tidelands.

Another condition Turski said he would appeal is that he construct a new road (Weatherly Drive) along the southern boundary of his project.

He maintained the responsibility for construction rests with a neighboring landowner and the county through a previous agreement.

Planning Panel Approves Revised Townhouse Plan

A revised master plan calling for construction of a second phase to the Villa Marin Gardens apartment development in Tennessee Valley was approved yesterday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

The new plan, which proposes fewer units than the original plan rejected by the commission last month, was approved unanimously. Commissioners John F. West and George P. Leonard were absent.

As outlined by architect Norman T. Gilroy of Mill Valley, the new plan calls for 95 new townhouse and apartment units — 40 fewer units than originally proposed.

The plan also revised a street pattern which was endorsed by the county's planning department but criticized by the public works department since roads width would be only 20 feet wide in some sections.

The new development will be located at the toe of a forested slope on Tennessee Valley Road near Shoreline Highway. The hillside will remain in open space.

Marin County Planning Commission Also:

VENETIA COVE — Continued to Feb. 14 action on a proposed master plan for the 101-unit Venetia Cove townhouse development north of the Lowell Avenue-North San Pedro Road intersection in Santa Venetia.

RANCH — Rejected a proposed master plan for the Circle V Ranch on White's Hill west of Fairfax. The owner, Jack Farrar, proposed the 320-acre parcel be split into 20-acre chunks which could then be resubdivided. The commission denied his request, saying his master plan did not meet zoning code requirements.

SUBDIVISION — Approved a tentative subdivision map submitted by James Erickson of San Rafael for a single-family residential development at Blackstone Drive and Las Gallinas Avenue in Marinwood. The proposed development would have about 11 homes on about 10 acres.

HEARING — Set Feb. 14 for a public hearing on proposed rezoning of the Mount Burdell rock quarry property from manufacturing to limited agricultural. The quarry has been the center of debate over proposals that its rock be used for the controversial Highway 101 bypass project at Novato.

INDIAN VALLEY — Set Feb. 28 for a public hearing on a development plan for the Indian Valley area of Novato.

INDUSTRIAL PARK — Approved a master plan for the Del Pantano Industrial Park on 13 acres between Gnoss Field and Highway 101 near Novato. Commission approval, which has been pending since May, came when commissioners agreed to allow the developer to use sewage holding tanks, as opposed to waiting for annexation to the Novato Sanitary Distirct.

TENNIS CLUB — Continued to Feb. 28 proposed rezoning of the 34-acre Olive Ridge Tennis Club site on Olive Avenue near Novato. The continuance was requested pending annexation to the city, thus making a hearing at the county level unnecessary.

LAND SPLIT — Approved division of the 13-acre August Rohmann property on Silver Hills Road near Bear Vallley Road in Inverness. The land split had been delayed over a condition that Rohmann improve a section of Silver Hills Road. The commission lifted that condition.

Documents For My Lai 'Destroyed'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Seymour M. Hersh, the reporter who won the Pulitzer Prize for his disclosure of the My Lai massacre, charged Tuesday that Americal Division personnel systematically destroyed all documents about the incident to protect the officers involved.

In the second of two articles in New Yorker magazine based on the secret investigative report of the Pentagon's Peers Commission, Hersh said:

"The Peers commission concluded its investigation March, 1970, without being able to discover how the My Lai 4 files had disappeared. General Peers himself suspected that some of the key officers involved at the time were responsible.

"The truth was more damaging to the Army's system than Peers could imagine: that subsequent officers of the Americal Division, who had no direct involvement with My Lai 4 and its investigations, had destroyed evidence to protect the officers who preceded them."

Hersh reported last week that the Peers commission placed at 347 the number of civilians killed at My Lai, and he also said about 100 other civilians were massacred about the same time at the nearby hamlet of My Khe.

Hersh challenged the validity of the so-called Barker report, which has never been found. It was supposed to have been prepared by Lt. Col. Frank A. Barker Jr., commander of the My Lai task force.

The failure of the Army to produce the Barker report contributed to long delays in the court martial late last year of Col. Oran K. Henderson, commander of the 11th Brigade and Barker's superior. After a four-month trial, a seven-officer jury last month cleared Henderson of My Lai coverup charges.

Henderson was one of 14 officers accused of a coverup following the inquiry headed by Lt. Gen. William R. Peers. Charges against the others were dropped, although some of them since have been disciplined through administrative proceedings.

My Lai murder charges were brought against some of the members of the Barker task force, but only one, Lt. William L. Calley Jr., was found guilty. Convicted of at least 22 murders, Calley was sentenced to life last spring, but the term later was reduced to 20 years and still is under military review.

Capt. Ernest L. Medina, who was Calley's company commander on the My Lai sweep March 16, 1968, and now is back in civilian life' was acquitted of murder charges in September.

Hersh said Henderson testified before the Peers commission that the Barker report included statements from the field commanders, the helicopter pilots and enlisted men. Barker himself was killed in a helicopter crash three months after My Lai.

"The Peers commission was unable to find any copies of Colonel Barker's formal report in the headquarters of either the American Division or the 11th Brigade," Hersh said. "In addition, of the 400 witnesses who appeared before the commission, only two —Colonel Henderson and General Koster (Samuel W., the division commander) —claimed to have any knowledge of it.

"The evidence is overwhelming that if such a report was prepared by Barker it was a complete fraud. None of the principals in the My Lai 4 investigation ... had any knowledge of further inquiries.

"For them, the investigation had ended in March, a few days after it began," Hersh said.

Old Mill Principal To Head New School

David Erskine, the controversial principal of Old Mill School who came under fire last year for his innovative teaching methods, was reassigned to a new post last night — with his blessings.

The Mill Valley School District board voted 4-0 to approve Supt. James A. Collins's proposal that Erskine be given a new principalship this fall. Trustee John G. Eliot Jr. was absent.

The principal's exact assignment won't be known until administrative posts are announced early in March, Collins said.

Erskine was criticized last fall by a group of parents and others who objected to what they termed excessively innovative and experimental teaching at Old Mill School, where he has been principal for five years.

Collins said Old Mill parents, many of whom backed Erskine in a series of special meetings called to discuss the charges, had been aware of the impending reassignment since last spring.

He said it has been the district's policy to rotate administrators, including principals. Erskine told the board last night he approved of his reassignment.

The board also mulled the fate of Edna Maguire School and Alto School and indicated it would move Alto's students to Maguire this fall when a new middle school opens.

Trustees took no formal action on the matter, however, instructing Collins to return with an estimate on hiring a consultant to review changing attendance boundaries of Alto School.

The board also formally approved retroactive salary increases for employees, including 5.5 per cent for teachers and classified employees and 4.1 per cent for principals.

Other raises in salary were for part-time teacher aides, from $2.35 to $2.48 per hour, and for Carroll D. Killingsworth, director of business services, from $20,000 to $21,000 per year.

personal life and business interests.

"Hopefully, in the future, I will be able to devote more time to my business, play a little golf, even do some fishing and hiking, plus relieving my wife, Bette, of her title as a 'public official's widow,'" Baar, a real estate agent, said.

He served three terms on the San Rafael City Council, starting in 1957.

As a member of the board of supervisors, he has been best known for criticism of welfare, the Marin Veterans Memorial Building, and just about anything that tends to increase the cost of government.

Even though he occasionally has looked skeptically at those urging government action on the ecology front, Baar said he is a nature lover who enjoys hiking trails the "conservationists haven't heard of yet."

His decision not to run for a second term on the county board was "really a difficult one," he said. His membership on the county's transit district board, local agency formation commission and on the San Rafael Sanitation District board will terminate next January when his term expires on the board of supervisors.

PULLOUT

Nixon's trip to Red China next month.

As the White House arranged the President's broadcast and word of his intentions became public, Senate Democrats adopted a resolution urging him to withdraw all U.S. troops within six months on condition all prisoners were released.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who has sponsored a series of troop withdrawal amendments in the 92nd Congress, said after the Democratic caucus:

"I'd like nothing better than to have the rug pulled out from under me. That's fine. That would be great."

While the White House declined to say officially what Nixon would talk about, it was learned that in requesting broadcast time it told the networks Nixon would make new peace proposals. The plan would be formally given the Communists at Paris by William J. Porter, Nixon's ambassador to the peace talks who has been in Washington since last week.

Both Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., said Nixon was prepared to set a date.

Scott said in an interview with UPI that Nixon would offer to get out of Vietnam "lock, stock and barrel" in exchange for a release of POWs.

Scott said the offer would come "well before the elections."

Brooke, in a speech to the Greater Boston Young Republicans Club Oonday night, said, "I have heard that we will very soon — and I predict very soon — make an offer to North Vietnam to set a date for withdrawal if they will turn over to us the 1,500 Americans who remain in North Vietnamese prison camps."

Neither Scott nor Brooke cited the source of his information.

Communist negotiators in Paris have insisted that there would be no problem about release of American POWs once Nixon set a definite date for complete U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam.

The Pentagon says 378 Americans are "confirmed" prisoners in North Vietnam and 84 in South Vietnam. In addition, 407 Americans are listed as missing in action in North Vietnam and 506 in South Vietnam.

Both Scott and Brooke expressed support for Nixon, and Brooke said he would back Nixon in the Massachusetts presidential primary April 25 if he runs there.

Scott made his statements while discussing the impact of the war on the 1972 presidential election campaign. He predicted that despite the winding down of the war, the "Democrats will attempt to revive the war issue."

cept their responsibilities" in planning matters.

Lee, 44, lives at 41 Madrone Avenue with his wife, Elizabeth. They have four children. He owns an industrial designing business in San Francisco, and has been on the city planning commission since 1965.

A challenger emerged today in the Cotati City Council election as Patrick Henry Corrigan, 25, announced his candidacy.

Corrigan, of 8015 Old Redwood Highway, owns Corrigan's Auto Service on East Cotati Avenue. He is a graduate of Santa Rosa High School and has lived in Cotati for nearly three years. He is single.

Corrigan said that during the campaign he will oppose further subdivisions such as the Holiday Park development. He said he believes that more housing tracts would turn Cotati into a bedroom community and damage the rural atmosphere.

Corrigan said more stringent sign controls also will be one of his major campaign issues.

Incumbent Cotati Councilman Lester H. Petersen has already filed for relection.

Year's First Rainstorm Splashes Marin, Sonoma

The first significant rainstorm of 1972 hit Marin and Southern Sonoma last night and this morning, but was gentle enough to cause little damage.

It also did little to alleviate a shortage of water in Marin reservoirs, according to a spokesman for the Marin Municipal Water District.

The storm brought district reservoirs up to 42 million gallons by this morning, but the five lakes still are 35 per cent below what they should be for this time of year the spokesman said. Last year, the lakes had six milion gallons more than at present.

Although the sun broke through in parts of Marin nd Southern Sonoma late this morning, the National Weather Service predicted continuing rain, and snow in some areas, as an arctic storm moves down the coast and inland. Bay Area mountains, including Mount Tamalpais may get snow by nightfall, as below freezing temperatures were predicted for higher altitudes.

The storm dumped 1.02 inches of rain on Ross — the area of heaviest rainfill in Marin County — but season rainfall totals still are far below what they were at this time last year.

Other 24-hour rainfall totals at 8 a.m. today were: Santa Venetia, .52 of an inch; Point Reyes Station, .64; Woodacre, .74; Fairfax, .50; Golf Tract area of San Rafael, .33; Petaluma, .43; Novato, .45; Sausalito, .05; Bolinas, .29; Mill Valley, .16; Tamalpais Valley, .14, Tiburon, .13 and Belvedere, .10.

San Rafael, at noon today, had recorded .83 inches for a 24-hour period.

Winds up to 39 miles per hour were reported in the Belvedere area, and in San Rafael winds and rain combined to knock a tree limb down onto a power line along Paloma Avenue, cutting off power to more than 100 residents during the morning. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. crews were at work trying to restore service late this morning.

Meanwhile, in Seattle, schools were closed because of heavy snows, whipped by 50 mile per hour winds. The snow ranged from a few inches to more than a foot, and drifted to four feet on some highways.

Seattle's transit system was bogged down because of the snow, but was still functioning on a limited basis. The snow extended as far south as Northern California.

The snow level in Northern California mountains was expected to drop below 1,000 feet.

Sewage Work Schedule Due Study Tomorrow

A work schedule for preparation of plans for facilities to dispose of sewage in southeast Marin will be considered by the Marin Municipal Water District board when it meets at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow in the district office in Corte Madera.

The district is currently in the process of establishing a consolidated agency to treat Southern Marin wastes, as well as making plans for a bond election to finance the new agency and for new treatment and disposal facilities which will be needed.

According to Gen. Mgr. William R. Seeger, the scheduale will be for engineers who will propose and design the facilities and prepare cost estimates which would be presented to voters in the bond election.

Relocating Meetings Will Be Considered

The Dixie School District board will consider a proposal that it schedule board meetings at various schools in the district when it meets tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the district office, 35 Trellis Drive, Terra Linda.

The board also will receive reports from Asst. Supt. Raymond A. Riley analyzing results of achievement tests in the district and presenting opportunities for teacher training and developing teaching programs in environmental education.

Hospital Board Meets Tonight

The Marin Hospital District board will consider asking bids on four remodeling projects expected to cost more than $300,000 at its regular meeting today.

The business meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the Coral Room of Marin General Hospital.

The board also will hear a report on the hospital's incinerator, which has been found substandard by the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District.

Additional Steam Study Funds Asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Geological Survey has asked for $2.5 million to step up development of geothermal energy resources.

The funds, $1.8 million more than the appropriation for the current fiscal year, were requested Monday in President Nixon's budget for the 1973 fiscal year beginning July 1.

not be reapportioned until the 1974 election.

Harmer's memo also disclosed a previously unannounced meeting of the Senate Elections and Reapportionment Committee would be held after a full meeting of the upper house this afternoon in order to act on a reapportionment bill.

Harmer did not identify the Democratic leaders said to have approached him. It was commonly acknowledged, however, that a major victim of the Supreme Court's decision last week was Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, who is majority floor leader.

The Senate Reapportionment Bill, killed by the court through an elaborate renumbering of districts, would have allowed Moscone to run this year for a four-year term — thus getting a free shot for governor in 1974. Without such a renumbering of districts, Moscone would have to decide in 1974 whether to run for governor or Senate and would not have the opportunity for a free shot at the state's top executive post.

Harmer's memorandum noted that the Assembly leadership has assured passage through the lower house of any Senate reapportionment plan.

Senator Behr, outraged at Harmer's move, quickly and quietly began lining up support to abort the attempt.

Behr noted that leaders of both parties in both houses had agreed unanimously and after last Tuesdays court decision that it no longer was possible to reapportion in time for this year's election.

Meeting Focus On Tiburon Open Space

The acquisition of open space in Tiburon — its cost, the best way to pay for it, how to discourage development on land scheduled for parks and where open space should be located — will be explored at an adjourned Tiburon City Council meeting Thursday.

The council, meeting at 7:30 p.m. at city hall, will consider creation of an interim holding zone for land on Tiburon Ridge and acquisition and development of trails, lanes and paths.

Steam Bus Is Out Of Operation

OAKLAND (UPI) —The nation's first steam bus was out of service today with an engine breakdown, after one day on a regular transit line.6

The bus, developed during the past three years at a cost of more than $1.6 million, is intended to be the forerunner of smogless transit of the future.

Spokesman for the AC Transit Co., which operates Oakland and transbay lines, said a piston in the engine broke loose and caused undetermined damage.

William M. Brobeck, a Berkeley engineer who built the bus, said it will be out of service for one week at least while a study of the damage and repairs are made.

The bus was inaugurated Monday morning and had received a "tremendous, enthusiastic" reception from patrons and ecology fans who rode it during the initial runs. The breakdown occurred at the end of the day.

Hongisto Asks Bigger Budget

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A $4.9 million budget request was made Monday by the San Francisco Sheriff's Department, an increase of $1.25 million over 1970-71.

Sheriff Richard Hongisto said the new budget would bring food, sanitation, medical and dental care up to the minimum state standards.

Governor Fires Pollution Aide

KERRY MULLIGAN
Faces bribe charge

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — In sisting he will not tolerate conflicts of interest, Gov. Ronald Reagan has requested the resignation of his administration's top water pollution official because of a "regrettable error in judgment" involving outside activities.

Reagan Monday night asked for the resignation of Kerry Mulligan, 46, chairman of the California Water Resources Control Board who earlier in the day had been accused along with two Los Angeles businessmen of attempting to bribe a Honolulu city official.

Reagan said the request for Mulligan's resignation was "irrespective of any allegations or evidence" in the Honolulu case.

The governor's office said Reagan took the rare action "when he learned that Mulligan has served as a consultant for a private engineering firm which has sought contracts with public agencies outside California."

Reagan later told newsmen after a banquet speech," I felt there was a regrettable error in judgment that created a conflict of interest." He added the private firm "conceivably" could have been doing business with the state of California.

The governor, who appointed Mulligan to his $26,250 per year post in 1969, said he had not yet talked with the chairman. Aides said Mulligan had not submitted his resignation either.

By the nature of Mulligan's appointment, Reagan had no power to fire him. He was appointed to a four-year term which does not expire until Jan. 15, 1973.

It was the third recent incidence of administration embarrassments, which historically have seemed to occur during the second term of a governor.

The State Department of Finance, on Reagan's orders, has sent 30 auditors into the field to investigate charges the Division of Industrial Safety has been lax in prosecuting businesses that maintain dangerous working conditions.

Last August, Reagan fired J. Jamison Moore of Beverly Hills from the State Commission on Marine and Coastal Resources for accepting a $22,500 consulting fee from private developers. He also asked for Moore's resignation from a four-year appointment to the State Navigation and Ocean Development Commission, but Moore refused.

Mulligan and the relatively new Water Resources Control Board generally have received high marks from administration officials, legislators and environmentalists for their efforts to keep California's waters free of pollution.

Warrants were issued Monday for the arrest of Mulligan, Harvey Ludwig, board chairman of Engineer Science Corp. of Los Angeles; and Joseph Feeney, an executive of the consulting firm. The three were accused in a complaint signed by Jack Teehan, acting Honolulu urban renewal coordinator. City officials said the three offered Teehan a $20,000 bribe involving the design contract of a sewage plant.

Mulligan issued a statement through his Sacramento office saying, "I am not familiar with any of the allegations... Before I respond (to news reports) directly or indirectly, I will need more information. Therefore I have engaged an attorney to represent me and will not have further comment until I have had an opportunity to consult with him."

Mulligan was the water board's executive official before being appointed its chairman. He is a former mayor of St. Helena, where he served as president of a land and investment company from 1962-66 and operated an automobile dealership.

Body Discovered In Covered Patio

The body of Antonio D. Andreis, 80-year-old retired sheet metal worker, was found at 11:30 a.m. yesterday hanging from a beam in a covered patio at his home at 49 Brentwood Drive, San Rafael, the Marin County Coroner's office reported.

The body was found by a granddaughter, according to the coroner.

Andreis had been living with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Andreis. The daughter-in-law, Joan, said she had last seen Andreis when she left on a shopping trip about 11:15 a.m.

Mrs. Andreis said her father-in-law had been extremely worried about illness, even though he was in excellent health, the coroner's office reported.

He is also survived by another son, Hugo Andreis, four other grandchildren, and many relatives in Italy.

Cook Gets Portrait A Bit Late

UTICA, N.Y. — When he was 12, a recent immigrant from Greece and a newsboy, an artist asked George Dimitry to pose for her.

At the age of 67 Dimitry found the artist as well as the picture she painted 55 years earlier.

He knew that the artist's name was Tillie Sweet and the name of the street she had lived on. He began knocking on doors and, after many weeks, he found Mrs. Tillie Sweet Fisk. She remembered him and said she thought she still had the portrait.

It was in her attic, wrapped in foil, and in good condition.

Artist and subject quickly agreed on a price — $30 — and Dimitry may be the only short-order cook with an oil painting of himself. Well, certainly the only one who waited 55 years to buy it.

Special School Elections Hit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation which would allow members of a local school board to fill a vacancy on the board by appointment instead of calling an election has been introduced by Sen. John Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek.

The bill, introduced Monday, would require that the appointee could not be identified as an "incumbent" if he later sought election to the board.

In a case where the majority of the positions on the board were vacant, a special election would still be called.

Currently, an election must be called anytime a vacancy occurs. Critics have contended this puts local districts to needless expense when shortterm vacancies must be filled.

READY TO RETURN — American novelist Clifford Irving and his wife Edith are in front of their Ibiza home with sons Nedsky (left),4, and Barnaby, 2. Irving plans to return to the U.S. Wednesday to keep a New York court date regarding a $55 million libel suit.

(UPI Telephoto)

Hughes Case 'Author' Due In Court

IBIZA, Spain (UPI)—Clifford Irving, writer of a controversial autobiography of Howard Hughes, said today he would return to the United States Wednesday with his wife Edith although Swiss police asked her to go to Zurich to "clarify some important matters."

Irving said he was going to New York to answer a summons from the New York State Supreme Court in connection with a $55 million libel suit filed agaist him by a Swiss art dealer who says he was libeled in Irving's book "Fake!"

Mrs. Irving, a Swiss, said she was willing to go to Zurich "to prove her innocence" but that she would like to accompany Irving to the United States. She said she was not the blonde Swiss "Helga R. Hughes" sought for cashing $650,000 worth of checks made out by the New York publishing firm of McGraw-Hill to Hughes for his contributions to the autobiography.

An international search was underway for the blonde who vanished after removing the money from a Swiss bank.

(In Zurich, police said they would like to talk with Irving and his wife about the checks cashed by "Helga R. Hughes." Police Lt. Willy Ulrich said Zurich police have not ordered the Irvings to appear. Police have issued a warrant on fraud charges for "Helga R. Hughes."

(Asked at a news conference at Zurich police headquarters whether police are interested in seeking Irving, Ulrich replied, "Yes." Asked about Mrs. Irving, Ulrich also said "Yes."

(Asked whether they could be brought to Zurich, Ulrich said: "They ought to come voluntarily. Otherwise one would first have to begin working on a request for legal assistance. We have not ordered anyone to appear. Anyone who wishes to come ought to come."

(Ulrich said "Helga Hughes" used a false Swiss passport to open an account at the Swiss Credit Bank for cashing the McGraw-Hill checks. He said the passport bore the number of a passport issued to another person whom he refused to name and gave "Helga Hughes" birthdate as Feb. 19, 1929."

(Ulrich said police have asked American officials to provide information in the case but gave no details.)

The Irvings told newsmen they will leave Wednesday (2 a.m. EST) on a plane for Barcelona then continue to New York. There was no flight number yet on the Barcelona-New York leg of the trip.

"I phoned Zurich police this morning and asked them whether I could go with my husband or return to Zurich," Mrs. Irving, a Swiss national, said. "They said they want me to come to Zurich as soon as possible to clarify some important matters."

She said her "first impulse was to get back to Zurich to show that I have nothing to hide, and to prove my innocence. Our enemies are obviously trumping up things in such a way that I am afraid it will be a mess to try to dismantle what they are trying to say."

Irving said "powerful and ruthless people" were out to "ruin" him in an effort to prevent publication of the Hughes autobiography. He spoke to newsmen at his 300-year-old farmhouse on Ibiza, off the Spanish Mediterranean coast.

Irving's wife Edith and Hungarian painter Elmyr de Hory stood by Irving today as he spoke of the "powerful and ruthless people" out to ruin him. De Hory was the subject of Irving's best-selling book "Fake!"

De Hory achieved fame for fooling leading art experts with imitations of paintings executed in the style of famous masters. He said he has known Irving for many years and thought it "impossible that his book is a hoax." He said their relations were somewhat strained, however, by a libel suit filed against Irving by a Swiss art dealer because of the book.

An affidavit reportedly signed by Hughes said the billionaire never authorized the publishers or authors of two controversial "autobiographical" books "to publish anything by or about me."

The affidavit was filed in New York Supreme Court — which is not the state's highest court — on Monday in support of Rosemont Enterprises Inc., a Nevada-based company which seeks to halt publication and distribution of the books. Rosemont, the affidavit said, has "the sole exclusive rights to publish my biography, autobiography, life story, memoirs and accounts of incidents or events in my life."

State Supreme Court Justice Gerald P. Culkin said he would rule soon on Rosemont's request for an injunction.

San Quentin Six Halts Proceedings

A petition filed by six San Quentin convicts charged with murder in connection with the Aug. 21 bloodbath at the prison yesterday successfully halted proceedings in their case by challenging Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court.

The six claimed in a handwritten document that the judge is prejudiced against them and that he is involved in a conspiracy against them, along with their court-appointed attorneys.

McGuire, who sporadically has been hearing pretrial matters in a heavily guarded courtroom in the Hall of Justice, said the petition was adequate to stop proceedings.

The judge said he will file a written reply to the allegations and then turn the matter over to the State Jucicial Council for a hearing on whether he is prejudiced.

The council could assign an outside judge to conduct a hearing or rule without a court session.

The six men — Fleeta Drumgo, John Larry Spain, Hugo A. Pinell, Willie Tate, David Johnson and Louis N. Talamantez — are accused of murdering three guards and two inmates.

Yesterday, Drumgo's mother told reporters before the court session she was fearful recent comments by prison officials might cause another outburst of violence at the prison.

SOLID AMERICAN THINKING:

GREMLIN

The best of American thinking has always been practical. Like our Gremlin. It's just what this country has always needed. It's small where you want it to be. With a longer wheelbase and wider track that still can turn inside a VW Beetle.

And, Gremlin is big where you'd like it to be.

With a solid 232 cubic inch standard six-cylinder engine that out-powers the four-cylinder engine of other small cars. Like Datsun, Toyota, Pinto and Vega.

It's heavier than most small cars which means a solid, stable ride.

And with a 21 gallon gas tank that's almost twice the capacity of just about every other small car, you can go up to 480 miles on a single tankful. Drive one. At $1999*, our Gremlin, backed by the American Motors Buyer Protection Plan, is a very Solid American buy.

OUR NEW PRICE: $1999.*

*Manufacturer's suggested retail price, state and local taxes excluded. White walls $34.35. California destination charges $99, and other options extra.

OUR PROMISE:

When you buy a new 1972 car from an American Motors dealer, American Motors Corporation guarantees to you that, except for tires, it will pay for the repair or replacement of any part it supplies that is defective in material or workmanship.

This guarantee is good for 12 months from the date the car is first used or 12,000 miles, whichever comes first.

All we require is that the car be properly maintained and cared for, under normal use and service in the fifty United States or Canada and that guaranteed repairs or replacements be made by an American Motors dealer.

ISRAELI STRIKES — This UPI Telephoto map pinpoints raids carried out yesterday on Arab guerrilla concentrations in Syria's Tel-El-Arar in the Golan Heights. It was the first such action in 18 months and brought a stern warning from Syria.

Second Day Of Rioting In Cairo

CAIRO (UPI) —Egyptian police used tear gas and clubs today against rock-throwing students demonstrating in the streets of Cairo to back demands for immediate war with Israel. It was the second consecutive day of such clashes.

President Anwar Sadat met at the heavily guarded Abdin Palace with 1,000 political leaders shortly after noon to discuss the student unrest.

A line of 50 regular police armed with three-foot-long bamboo canes manned steel barricades which cutoff access to the palace square. Behind them, another line of black uniformed regular police was drawn up. Several truckloads of khaki-clad riot police waited around the corner behind the barricades.

Truckloads of riot and regular police also were stationed in various strategic places in Cairo.

Students and police clashed in Opera Square, where the demonstrators used rocks snatched from the rubble of the burned-out opera house, and in Liberation Square.

Meanwhile, Syria was warned by Israel to curb guerrilla attacks from its territory or face more reprisals from the Jewish nation.

The warning followed the first raid Israeli jets carried out against targets inside Syria in 18 months.

The fact that the Israeli jets Monday struck deep inside Syria "does not mean the Israeli armed forces will not act in various ways to curb guerrilla activity from Syrian territory," a military correspondent of the Israeli national radio station said.

The military command said the Israeli jets pounded an Arab guerrilla camp at Tel-El Harar, four miles north of the large Syrian community of Daraa.

The announcement said Israeli raiders returned safely and reported scoring direct hits in the Target agrea. It said hundreds of the estimated 2,000 guerrillas operating in Syria were based at the Tel-El Harar camp.

Electives Program Wins Board's Nod

The Kentfield School District board last night approved an afternoon program of electives despite the objections of parents who wanted more emphasis on basics.

Supt. Anthony G. Bacich said today the board unanimously approved the program for Wolfe Grade School over the protests of nine parents in the audience of 50 to 60 persons.

The board, however, asked for an evaluation on Feb. 28 of the program for fourth, fifth and sixth graders, Bacich said.

The superintendent explained that the purpose is to consolidate certain types of classes in three afternoons a week and offer more choice in each field. All but four of the courses are in areas of required study for elementary students, he said.

He said students will have a choice among 37 classes that will be taught each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 1:30 to 3:15 p.m.

Included are five physical education, seven music, seven language, four science, 10 art and four miscellaneous courses: woodworking, gardening, cooking and using audiovisual equipment.

Bacich said that in art, for example, only painting and work with clay previously were available. With the new program, children may choose from mosaics, needlepoint, sculpture, caligraphy, kite making and jewelry making, he said.

The classes will be taught by approximately 10 accredited teachers, five or six parent volunteers and 15 to 20 student teachers, Bacich said.

The full range of basic classes like reading and arithmetic will be scheduled in the morning hours, Bachich said.

The Kentfield School District Board Also:

WORKSHOP — Set a workshop for 8 p.m. Feb. 9 in the library of Wolfe Grade School to discuss with teachers staffing for the next school year in view of declining enrollment. The board learned kindergarten enrollment is expected to be 82 next year, down 16.

SCHOOL YEAR — Decided to give classified employees credit for a full year of employment after 10 months, instead of 14, so the date they are placed on the salary schedule will coincide with the beginning of the fiscal year.

TRANSFER — Denied the transfer of Michelle Harris, a kindergartner at Greenbrae School, to the Reed School District because Reed would require tuition.

HEALTH EDUCATION — Ordered a full outline of a course on venereal disease and drug abuse to be presented Feb. 28.

Innocent Plea To Robbery

Paul K. McSweeney, 24, of San Francisco, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of robbery stemming from an incident at the Corte Madera Shopping Center last Tuesday.

A preliminary hearing was set for Thursday.

McSweeney was arrested after grabbing a purse from a pregnant woman at the center, according to police. The woman, accompanied by her mother and an infant son, grabbed a landful of the robber's long hair.

Police said they arrested McSweeney minutes later at a nearby gas station where they found the purse in a restroom.

Nixon's Peking Trip Seen As Viet Solution

PARIS (UPI) — Former French Premier Pierre Mendes-France, back from a six-week visit to China, Japan and other Asian nations, said Monday that President Nixon's visit to China next month could lead to a solution of the Vietnam War.

Mendes-France, interviewed on a privately-run radio station said Nixon also was hoping his trip would open up the vast Chinese market to U.S. industrial goods.

He said after talking with Chinese leaders Nixon's talks in Peking would result in no immediate achievements, but could lay the groundwork for settlement of major Asian problems—withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam, Japan and Thailand, and reunification of Taiwan (Nationalist China) with the mainland.

Four Cereal Producers Accused Of Overpricing

WASHINGTON (UPI) The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) accused four manufacturers yesterday of illegally monopolizing the breakfast cereal business by a complex system of overpricing, false advertising and keeping competitors out.

The FTC proposed that at least some of the four firms be broken up, that the "big four" license some brands or trademarks free, and that they stop all anti-competitive practices including false advertising and control of grocery shelf space.

Named in the complaint were the Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Mich.; General Mills, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.; General Foods Corp., (Post cereal), White Plains, N. Y.; and The Quaker Oats Co., Chicago.

The FTC said these four firms control 90 per cent of the $650 million annual ready-to-eat breakfast cereal business.

Two smaller producers, Nabisco, Inc., N.Y., and Ralston Purina Co., St. Louis, Mo., were not named in the action although the FTC said they "contributed by acquiescence to the nonecompetitive structure of the cereal market."

Kellogg, the largest producer with 45 per cent of the cereal market, strongly denying the FTC allegations, claimed the complaint amounted to a belief that "it's a crime to be big, it's wrong to be efficient, it's wrong to succeed."

Alan Ward, director of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, told a news conference that the companies were not accused of conspiring to monopolize —the usual antitrust complaint —but rather of individually cooperating in a marketing, advertising and pricing system which neatly carved up the business and yielded fat profits for all four firms.

Ward said the case was the first in which false advertising had been cited to support antitrust action. The FTC said cereal advertisements falsely imply that breakfast cereals help children in sports.

It said Kellogg, General Mills and General Foods also falsely advertised that their cerals would help fat people lose weight.

Ward said one FTC study concluded that ceral prices would be "20 to 25 per cent lower under competitive conditions."

The FTC said the four companies kept prices up by never undercutting each others' price hikes. Private label brands, which help keep some grocery prices down, have been bought by by the big FOUR, THE FTC said.

With the help of high advertising expenditures, the FTC said, the four companies "artificially differentiate their ready-to-eat cereals."

"Respondents produce basically similar ready-to-eat cereals, and then emphasize and exaggerate trivial variations such as color and shape," the FTC said. "Respondents employ trademarks to conceal such basic similarities and to differentiate cereal brands."

The FTC said Kellogg largely controls the shelf space allotted to various cerals in grocery stores, restricting Nabisco and Ralston displays and removing cereals made by "small regional producers."

The agency said all four firms go along with the Kellogg control of shelfspace, "which protects and perpetuates their respective market shares."

The FTC said the alleged monopoly has been running for at least 30 years while cereal sales, profits and prices have soared.

The market has grown from $163 million in 1950 to more than $650 million in 1970, the FTC said, while advertising expenditures have tripled from 1950's $26 million to $81 million in 1970.

"Respondents have, individually and collectively, established and maintained artificially inflated prices for ready-to eat cereals," the FTC said.

"Respondents have obtained rights and returns on investment substantially in excess of those that they would have obtained in a competitively structured market.

"Product innovation has been largely supplanted by product imitation, the complaint said.

"Actual and potential competitio in the manufacture and sale of ready-to-eat cereal has been hindered, lessened, eliminated and foreclosed."

The FTC was deliberately vague in its proposals to remedy the alleged monopoly, saying it would make specific rulings during court consideration of the case, which Ward estimated would take several years.

However, Ward said a breakup of one or more companies had to be part of a settlement. The FTC staff's original proposal to the five FTC commissioners called for breaking Kellogg and General Mills into two firms each.

Credit Card Firm Agrees To Stop Ad Practices

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A credit card registration firm was ordered today not to advertise its services by misrepresenting the misfortunes of persons who have their credit cards stolen.

Superior Judge Byron Arnold signed a consent decree against Credit Card Service Bureau of America, Washington, D.C., in a suit filed by the consumer fraud division of the California attorney general's office. He also ordered the firm to pay the state $5,000 in court costs and fees.

The decree, consented to by the company, forbids it from misstating the potential liabilities of California credit card holders, making undocumented claims about the practices of card-issuing companies and describing the financial misfortunes of card holders unless they can prove that they actually occurred.

In addition, the firm was ordered to submit a copy of all its advertisements circulated in California during the next three years to Attorney General Evelle Younger's office.

Younger said the suit was filed in December of 1970 because the firm, which agrees to notify card-issuing companies of any lost or stolen cards for a $9 annual fee, was making "gross misstatements" about cardholders' liabilities and described "alleged practices by credit card companies which, in the light of California law, were unlawful and in fact did not even happen."

Since the suit was filed, the federal and state governments have narrowed a card holder's liability even more said Deputy Attorney General John C. Porter. Federal law sets a maximum liability of $50 a card in most cases and the state made a telephone call or telegram about a lost or stolen card sufficient notification to halt all liability.

Philippine Imports

MANILA (UPI) —Despite its abundant fishing grounds, the Philippines has had to import an average of 62 million pesos (about $10 million) worth of fish products, mostly canned, every year because of haphazard development of the fishing industry.

Orr Hearing Lurches Past 16th Session

By MARY LEYDECKER

Fairfax's longest-running attraction, the hearing before the city's board of review at which Police Chief James R. Orr is appealing his firing, lurched through its 16th session last night with little new light shed on the subject.

On the stand again was City Administrator Robert E. Crowe, who was crossexamined by Orr's attorney, Leonard Shaw, as to why he recommended that Orr be fired.

Point by laborious point, Shaw led Crowe through a memorandum the city administrator had written to the city council last September recommending the chief be dismissed.

Crowe, at best a reluctant witness, looked here and there, rolled a pencil in his hands and deliberated silently before answering each question. His response frequently drew fire from Shaw, who protested the city official was not answering his questions. And the board chairman, Freeman Blake, several times requested Crowe to answer directly.

At the end of the session, nothing much new had emerged.

Crowe talked again of "immorality" allegedly displayed by the chief in connection with police clerk Marsha Kittelman, with whom he is accused of having improper social relations.

First Crowe said he thought the chief's actions were "improper" rather than immoral, but then he said charges of immorality stemmed from Orr's taking his vacation at the same place as Mrs. Kittelman — not because they went away at the same time.

"I wasn't there," Crowe responded to a question as to whether he knew if anything "immoral" had taken place on the vacations.

As to a charge of fixing tickets, Crowe said this stemmed primarily from a note attached to a parking ticket which arrived in the mail during the chief's vacation.

"One of your officers appears to be overzealous — would you do something about this?" Crowe said the note said in essence.

Shaw then asked him if the administrator knew the ticket had already routinely been sent to the courts, and Crowe replied he did but added, "It was during the chief's vacation."

He said that a charge of "fixing" did not include an allegation that Orr had been paid for favors but rather that he had shown favoritism to friends and supporters.

Tapes which Shaw hopes will show that Crowe was hired last February with the secret understanding he would get rid of the chief have been located, the lawyer said last night.

He told the board he hoped to preview them before today's session scheduled to begin this afternoon in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Mademoiselle Names Top Young Women

By DIANA LOERCHER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — The timehonored tradtiion of breast-beating over the vagaries of the "younger generation" is attributable in part to lack of acquaintance. Even the "kids" don't know who they are yet or what they'll become. However, the equally notorious mistrust they level at the "over 30s" is at least based on observation of relatively definitive life choices.

One grasps at any clue that prognosticates the identity of those who come after us. The annual awards given by Mademoiselle magazine this year at the Whitney Museum suggest in their own small way the most positive aspects of that identity.

Mademoiselle has been presenting awards to outstanding young women for 28 years, which should make it something of a cultural barometer. Until 1969 the awards went primarily to young women who showed exceptional promise in their chosen fields, which generally fell under the rubric of the arts, the traditional province of both women and fashion magazines. Maria Callas, Audrey Hepburn, Margot Fonteyn, Anne Klein, and Joyce Carol Oates are random but representative past winners.

ALICIA BAY LAUREL

MARJORIE CROW

NIKKI GIOVANNI

PAMELA GENTRY

SUSAN DAVIS

MRS. JAMES L. JONES

IN RESPONSE to the shifing winds buffeting female roles, the awards were given in 1969 instead "to young women who've carved niches for themselves often behind the headlines, beyond traditional areas." Indicating that social commitment now shares the prizewinning status of talent, Bernadette Devlin was honored in 1969 along with more conventional winners such as Ali MacGraw.

Each year's winners since have reflecting more dramatically the new priorities of the magazine and implicitly of youth. Introduced by editor in chief Edith Raymond Locke and heralded by the chairman of the New York City Commission on Human Rights, Eleanor Holmes Norton, the seven this year serve as a kind of testimony to the future. One was of personal interest to me.

PAMELA GENTRY, 23 and half-Cherokee, is executive director of Los Angeles's Environmental Sciences Council and a writer for Environmental Quality magazine. She will be the editor in chief of a special issue evaluating political candidates on the basis of their commitment to ecology. In addition she holds an executive position on a Los Angeles radio station and is a women's liberation organizer.

MARJORIE CROW, 25, has recently attracted the attention of the news media through her founding of True to Life magazine, distributed through Emory University's family-planning program. Her publication seeks to deal candidly with female problems pertaining to birth control, feminine hygiene and marriage.

GLENDA COPES, 28, elected president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People chapter in Hartford, Conn., in 1968, now is a staffer on a community agency called Greater Hartford Process that is tackling the city's urban problems.

NIKKI GIOVANNI, also 28, is a black poet and a teacher at Rutgers University. Her poems, which she reads in churches and on campuses, have won her a sizable following among young people.

SHERRI WINTER KAPLAN, 23, is a co-founder (with her husband) of HELP, a youth-run referral agency in Philadelphia that informs young people of the resources available for help with their problems, such as drugs or birth control.

ALICIA BAY LAUREL (she named herself after her favorite tree) is 22 and the author and illustrator of "Living on the Earth," an ode to nature in the form of "celebrations, storm warning, formulas, recipes, rumors, and country dances."

The seventh winner I'm sure was a greater surprise to me than anyone else at the dinner. I recognized Susan Davis, editor and publisher of The Spokeswoman, an independent monthly newsletter of women's news, early in the evening but decided to wait until after the dinner to cast the past across her path.

We were classmates during our adolescence, wearing our little blue uniforms to school each day. We did not know each other very well in those days, much less could we foresee how either of us would "turn out."

Reminiscing and confiding as neither friends nor strangers, we tried to explain how we arrived at our respective positions vis-a-vis women's lib. Sue started The Spokeswoman as a project for Urban Research, the Chicago company where she works, to disseminate women's news, which she feels is slighted by the mass media.

HER MONTHLY newsletter, which she now owns herself, is a compendium of facts and statistics compiled from national sources that stockpiles ammunition for the women's liberation movement. Among the highlights of the January issue, for example, are the announcement of the little publicized fact that "Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson has signed revised Order 4 requiring federal contractors to set goals and timetables to rectify job discrimination against women." Another item pertains to the Equal Pay Act of 1963, which makes corporations that have paid women less money than men for the same work liable for "back pay," to the tune of some $40 million, according to Sue.

She also organized through Urban Research equal-employment conferences attended by major companies, and finds herself increasingly interested in capital formation as an essential tool for the liberation of women, recalling the old adage that "money equals power."

Paris Shows The 'Vulgar' Look

High Heels And Short Skirts In

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—After saying for years that short skirts look vulgar with high-heeled shoes, Paris now is showing short skirts with high-heeled shoes.

Louis Feraud, one of the hero designers for the younger generation, presented in his spring high fashion show girls who could have been standing under 1929 lampposts.

Take a white knit little dress with a pleated skirt dancing a good six inches above the knee and a lacy ruffled collar. Add red platform-soled shoes with an ankle strap and towering chunky heels, long rope pearls, a red scarf tied sideways over the head, long rope pearls, long Ginger Rogers pageboy hairdo and lots of makeup.

THE FERAUD mannequins minced down the runway on those staggering heels to the tune of a mechanical player piano Charleston instead of his usual rock music background. The final scene was like the late, late show on television when two girls came out in beaded hip-hugging evening gowns with tulle ruffles around the hem, all bounce and fun for young girls who follow Feraud's look.

Feraud did his collection in bright red, navy or white for a seaside theme. The marine fad for spring, already shown in Paris ready-to-wear, was reflected in big appliques of ships on bright red wool coats.

The Feraud white trousers were wide, some downright baggy, with colored cuffs to match hip-length loose topcoats.

Evening dresses went to the floor, one of the prettiest being navy-and-white pin striped silk with long full sleeves.

The collection was quieter at the salon of Philippe Venet. But even this master of tailored, classic clothes kept his hemlines well at the top of the knee. And the leg was given more emphasis through flared hemlines on skinny coats and ruffles on printed silk cocktail dresses.

One of his prettiest coats was a white wool clinging to the body and breaking into a flare just above the knee. The collar was wide and flared.

SUITS DOMINATED the collection, narrow skirts plus belted hip-length jackets with narrow sleeves and shoulders, sometimes worn with blouses or scarves and sometimes not.

The new interest in China was reflected in brief satin Mao jackets in those brilliant Chinese colors worn over short evening black chiffon dresses embroidered in bright hues.

Venet also kept trousers, showing white semi-wide pants with short flared reversible wool colored jackets and halter neck sweaters.

As Esterel's show got underway to sleepy-eyed press and buyers one minute after midnight, the mustached designer announced he was keeping a foot in both the ready-to-wear and high fashion camps, and blasted any designer who would pull out of one or the other.

TENDENCY SKETCHES from fashion designer Louis Feraud's 1972 spring and summer collection illustrate the designer's very short skirts with high heels. The collection, shown yesterday in Paris, is a reverse of the long-time fashion no-no. (UPI Telephoto)

Marin Women

Mrs. Jones New Co-op President

The San Anselmo Co-operative Nursery School will be headed this year by Mrs. James L. Jones of San Anselmo as president.

Kathleen Jones previously has served as its membership chairman. She said that the group teaches pre-school children and is open to any woman with children between the ages of 2 years and 9 months and 5 years. Mrs. Jones added that plans for the year include remodeling of the school, beginning in June, a fund-raising event to be held Feb. 12 and an open house in April.

A native of San Francisco, Kathleen Jones is a graduate of Lowell High School there and she has lived in Marin for two-and-a-half years. She and her husband, a purchasing manager, are parents of two children, Kimberly, 4; and Daniel 2.

Art, sewing and knitting are among her hobbies.

Other new officers who will take office this month are Mmes. Warren Stockard, vice president; Charles Feeney, building committee chairman; Grace Ferguson, secretary; Jackie Leonard and Douglas Lathrop, program; David Teach and Robert Irving, scheduling; and Fred Takowsky and David Newby, maintenance.

New Books For Children, Adults

Dr. Robert E. Switzer, director of the Children's Hospital at the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kan., and his associate director, Dr. J. Cotter Hirschbert, have put together a series of creative, problem-solving books written for children and adults.

The titles: Sometimes I Get Angry, My Friend the Baby Sitter, Sometimes I'm Afraid, and Look at Me Know. All are designed as shared problem-solving experiences. Each begins with explanatory "Notes to Parents," telling how parents can and should be sensitive to their child's emotional patterns and problems, how they can cope, aid and mend early anxieties by simple, soothing communication.

New Women Magazine On Stands

The new magazine for women edited by feminist Gloria Steinem is due on the nation's newsstands today in its first full edition. The special preview issue will be dated Spring 1972.

Titled "Ms.", the magazine will resume monthly editions beginning in June, after the editor and publisher, Elizabeth Forsling Harris, assesses reader reaction.

No traditional "woman's magazine," Ms. in its preview edition carries such articles as "De-Sexing the English Language," "Men's Cycles —They Have Them, Too," a play by Sylvia Plath, "The Black Family and Feminism" by Eleanor Holmes Norton, "My Mother, the Dentist," by Nicholas Von Hoffman; and "Rating the Candidates" by Brenda Feigen Fasteau and Bonnie Lobel.

Other articles appear on such topics as child care centers, where to get help — addresses of some national women's groups, abortion, women and war by Daniel Ellsberg, sexist upbringing, why women fear success, and Gloria Steinem's "Sisterhood."

A preview of the first issue appeared between the covers of New York magazine last month.

"The first is needed to cope with demads of the bank manager, the second to provide the public with the dreams it needs," said Esterel.

"PARIS WILL remain Paris when helped by those who know how to stop doing their accounts and remain artists. The design technocrats are seeing where they can move in. If they do, Paris will become reasonable. And then another city will be chosen as the one which has the talent to attract the talent."

Esterel, who recently opened a high fashion salon in New York, staged his show in his new super-modern red-and-white showroom. All the clothes were red, white and black to match.

The designer is reputed to make wild collections but this season his line was wearable, young and perky, with hemlines way above the knee.

The theme was vests. Suits were three piece —a narrow skirt a little short jacket with long full sleeves and a loose or belted vest, armholes huge, hanging to mid-hip.

A swinging black-and-white polka dot dress had a little white vest sewn onto the top with a separate polka dot vest over that.

A SIGNATURE throughout theshow was a wide, wide corselet leather belt. The girls also wore detached high leather poet laureate collars with striped or polka dot bow ties.

Dresses with ruffled armholes or short puffed sleeves were split up the middle to show ruffled petticoats underneath. Esterel also brought back the halter neck dress and used lots of shawl or middy collars. Esterel liked pique, and prints were either polka dots or stripes that widened out to awning-sized stripes for evening.

Stockings were red, white or black, and Esterel revived the good, old, spectator pump in red or black and white with a medium chunky heel.

Mother Thinks Burning Incense Is Same As Smoking Marijuana

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

My mother yells at me when I burn incense or a scented candle. She says it is very harmful and the same as smoking marijuana. She thinks it leads to narcotics addiction, and that I already must be on something, just because I occasionally like incense. Honest, I don't take drugs.

Mom also screams there must be something wrong with me because I do yoga exercises sometimes.

I am 16 and not allowed to go out. She says my job is to study and nothing else. Please try to unravel her set ideas. — LISA

DEAR LISA:

Unraveling your mother's rigid conclusions would be like melting a rock. She's prime proof of the old saying, "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing."

Look, mama: pot smokers sometimes burn incense and scented candles to hide the odor, but all incense lovers aren't druggies . . . including Sue and me. — HELEN

DEAR LISA:

Your mother "isn't wrapped too tight." Many kids these days are high on incense, scented candles, yoga, and yes — going out when you're 16 and ready. That doesn't mean they get high on drugs, or can't be trusted.

She may call me a spoiled brat, but I'll have to say. "Get your head on straight, mom, unless you want to lose your daughter." — SUE

DEAR RAP:

The letter written by "Fearful" made me fearful. I hope she hasn't got many backers.

VD isn't something you punish people for by exposing their names or sending them to jail. True, these rigid rules might decrease the epidemic, but think of the misery they would cause.

There are other ways to bring VD down, and the best is education — getting the word to everyone that a free examination at the county or city clinic can save a lot of suffering not only for you but for others you might have infected. And it's completely secret.

As long as we keep on assuming that venereal disease is sin with a capital S, we'll never conquer it. — FOR SENSIBLE FIGHTING

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I feel deep sympathy for anyone who has contracted VD, but especially for those non-promiscuous people who made one mistake — as I did. My boy friend is not a depraved person — far from it. But he's human. And I'm human, too.

Luckily, he recognized the symptoms and, though I didn't have any, he insisted that I be examined. My parents and a few friends were very understanding. Unlike many people, they realized it could happen to anyone — even them.

By all means, there should be more education, more campaigns, more free clinics, and a lot more awareness that VD is a disease, not retribution. — FORMER VICTIM OF VD

DEAR READERS:

The worst thing about both gonnorhea and syphillis is that the symptoms are so mild (especially in women) that they often go undetected, and they disappear completely after a short while, even though the diseases continue their destructive course — and carriers transmit them to others.

If you have the smallest suspicion that you have contracted venereal disease, get to a doctor fast. And remember, VD clinics are not only free, but your parents (in most states) need not be notified unless you give permission.

For further information on venereal diseases write to the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D.C. or your county health department. — HELEN

These Shears Do Everything

New fisherman's shears do everything but catch the fish, the manufacturer says. The shears feature a serrated blade that permits no slip cutting when removing tough fins, tails and heads.

The sharp blades are ideal for gutting fish, while the back of the top blade is a scaler so designed that scales fly away from the user. Handles can be utilized as a crew cap opener and bottle opener.

The back of the handles can be used as a pair of pliers and the extreme end of the handle incorporates a fish hook extractor. Blades can be taken apart for easy cleaning.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

The Best Deal For Your Dollar

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
(Distributed by General Features Corp.)

Sometimes it seems the best decorating dollar you can spend is the dollar devoted to buying bed linens. But don't limit these purchases to sleeping requirements; expand a bit and start using decorative bed linens as your best decorating co-ordinator.

Everywhere you go, from the specialty linen store to the department store or the big discount house, you can find handsome printed and colored bed sheets. It's a big piece of fabric for the money so you can afford to use the fabric in a lavish way.

Where else can you get designs by Emilio Pucci, Oscar de la Renta, Yves St. Laurent, David Hicks, Bill Blass, Vera and Peter Max at such fantastic bargain rates?

And it's not just one manufacturer giving you these bargains. The list includes Spring Mills, Stevens, Fieldcrest, Wamsutta, Burlington, Martex, Callaway and Cannon. Sears and Roebuck has been sponsoring a line of sheets designed by the famous storyteller Dr. Seuss, and there's a Stevens-Utica line of Charles Schulz' "Peanuts" characterizations on bed linens.

When colored bed sheets first came into vogue, there were magazine stories in the national publications showing readers how to accomplish a budget decorating job with these exciting new products.

Ordinary upholstery fabrics designed by these same famous-name people cost from $20 a yard and up. It's the same with the quality wall coverings bearing famous labels. Naturally, the more expensive products have been carefully developed and quality controlled so they function without failure as upholstery and wall-covering materials.

Bed linens are a wonderful tool for the budding decorator. You can afford to make a mistake. Chances are, however, that the results of your bed sheet mania will be more handsome than you had hoped.

When using sheet-weight fabric for wall installation, you might start with some long strips of wood, cut to frame the wall area. The fabric can be stapled to the wood strips, working from top strip down. If fabric stretches later, you can pry the lower strip loose and restaple.

If you plan to cover a window shade with fabric, a spray adhesive is a helpful tool. If you'd like to create a panel a child can use as a bulletin bord, adhere the fabric to a cork or Celotex board that takes pushpins and tacks with little effort. A painted frame of wood can always be added as a finishing touch.

My final word about bed linens used for design impact is this: If you are using them now for your beds, don't hide them under that heavy bedspread. Buy a few extras and use thme as the punchy, decorative top coverlet for every bed in the house. They're light in weight, easy to launder and make morning and evening bed-making chores considerably more pleasing because you're involved in a design exercise.

The Belted Look For The Spring

An important look for Ken Fleetwood's spring and summer collection for Hardy Amies Ltd. of London is the full-skirted dress with belt for daytime. For evening, he favored chiffon for dresses in prints with dark backgrounds, according to Women's Wear Daily.

The Amies collection is full of English tweed suits and bright yellow, green or red for coats and dresses.

It's Dedicated To Conservation

A new fabric collection is dedicated to conservation. Called "Wild Life-Wild Places," the collection is part of the manufacturer's continuing effort to preserve the natural environment.

Designers portray several bird, animal, tree and plant species that are in danger of becoming or have already become extinct. Included in the 11 screen-printed patterns are designs of Audubon's Prairie Chickens, exotic birds, wood ducks, redwoods, medicinal plants and more. Each was thoroughly researched and submitted to the World Wild Life Fund for approval before production.

The fund supports programs designed to preserve endangered land and species. To this end, the fabric-maker is donating royalties on the sale of fabrics in this new collection.

Stretch It

To stretch the clothing dollar, one trick is to buy off-season. February, for example, is the time to buy winter coats and heavy clothing in many areas, while late summer is the time for swimsuits and lightweight sportswear.

Vegetables which steam well in the oven include green, Italian and lima beans; beets, carrots, onions, parsnips, squash and turnips.

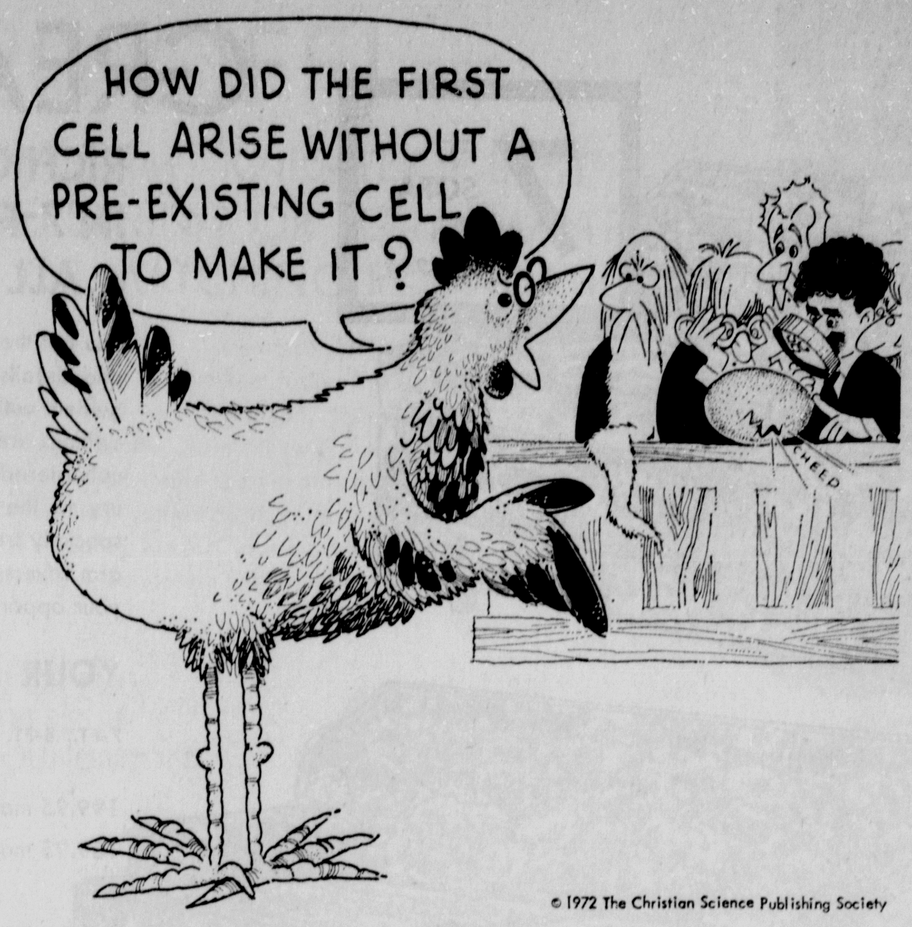
Chance-Of-Life Concept Weakened

By ROBERT C. COWEN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service
©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society



© 1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society

WASHINGTON D.C. — Paleobiologists are ready to write a recipe for "creation" of organic life. Although sketchy and probably incomplete, they think it could be enough to get life going on a raw, new planet such as the primitive earth.

Their confidence springs from a conviction that basic life chemicals have an inherent ability to form primitive living systems. That conviction grows out of experiments in which such chemicals have spontaneously developed protein-like and cell-like structures.

This view breaks with the long-held concept that life arose through unlikely chemical combinations that chanced to happen in the course of geological time. It opens an era in which some biologists seek to know organic life by putting together its chemical precursors rather than by taking apart its present living forms.

Dr. Sidney W. Fox of the University of Miami, one of the pioneers in this research, explains that life seems incredibly complex when viewed from the outside in. Like children bemused by a disassembled clock, life's dissectors find it hard to see how organic life arose from its basic chemicals. Hence, the appeal to chance happenings or, in the case of some scientists, to a mysterious "life principle" that vitalizes matter.

This mysticism vanishes, Fox says, when you put some of those basic parts together. You then begin to look at life from the inside out. You see how simple chemicals can organize themselves in unsuspected ways.

At a symposium on life synthesis held during the recent annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Fox called recognition of this capacity for self-assembly one of the most profound insights gained from more than a decade of research on the synthesis of life.

Fox and some other researchers work with a class of chemicals called the amino acids. While many such acids exist, relatively few play a role in organic lcfe. You can write a host of words by rearranging letters of the English alphabet. Nature, likewise, constructs a huge range of proteins from combinations of only about two dozen amino acids.

To simulate primitive conditions, experimenters prefer a somewhat different mix. They often use the kinds of amino acids that form from mixtures of formaldehyde and ammonia and other chemicals likely to have enriched the primordial atmosphere. Energize such mixtures with, say, a spark to simulate lightning and out come amino acids.

Given an amino-acid mix, the experimenters heat this under dry or semi-dry conditions. Soon the amino acids link together in long molecular chains that Fox calls proteinoids. They resemble contemporary protein. But they may not contain all of the usual protein-forming amino acids. And they may have some amino acids that play no part in life today.

Placed in hot water, such proteinoids quickly form microspheres that remind researchers of living cells.

Like cells, they have a semi-permeable membrane that lets small molecules pass while holding larger ones back; like cells, they grow to a characteristic limiting size.

Instead of growing larger, the spheres then "reproduce". They may divide in two, as do many cells. They may also multiply, as do some bacteria, by budding off small spheres which can grow into full sized replicas of their "parents."

The spheres are small enough to move about as part of a general molecular agitation. They often bump together and link up through hollow tubular collars. Tiny particles inside the spheres can pass through these collars from one sphere to another. These particles themselves probably could grow into yet more of the spheres.

Under some conditions, a sphere may contain many such particles. It may then burst or eject these particles in a process reminiscent of spore dispersal by some modern plants.

The proteinoids also have biologically suggestive properties as molecules. Reviewing these for the AAAS's symposium, Duane L. Rohlfing of the University of South Carolina pointed out that they don't form at random from the amino-acid mixtures. They seem to have preferred structures. This implies a degree of self-orienting in their assembly.

Taking all this together, paleobiologists think they have a model of how organic life may have arisen.

To put it in perspective, consider a living cell today. Whether it's a cell in one's body or in yeast growing in a piece of cheese, it has a nucleus containing giant molecules of a class called nucleic acids. These molecules carry genetic information that determines humans shall be human and yeast shall be yeast.

This genetic information determines what proteins a cell will make, when it will make them, and in what order. The proteins, in turn, serve as work horses of the life system.

They build and control much of the structure and nature of organisms. Some of them are enzymes that act as catalysts to facilitate key chemical processes of life, including manufacture of other enzymes. Others are homones that regulate bodily development and function.

The porteinoids and their microspheres are far removed from the rich chemical complexity of today's living cells. But, observes Fox, today's organisms should be far removed from their primordial ancestors. Even today's proteins are too specialized, too highly evolved, to act as starting material for the evolution of organic life.

The original protein and the original cell, Fox explains, must have been very simple with a general potential to evolve in many ways. He thinks the proteinoids and microspheres suggest this kind of simplicity.

Look at what proteinoids can do, advises Dr. Rohlfing. They resemble proteins in structure and function. They can act as hormones. They have enzyme-like ability. They can assemble themselves into microspheres that act in some respects like primitive cells.

This doesn't imply that the proteinoids and microspheres of the laboratory are themselves protocells or protoproteins. No one knows what the first cells and their proteins were like. Probably no one ever will know. But the laboratory models do indicate an evolutionary route by which the first life forms could have arisen.

With the help of the proteinoid model, Fox says he now can answer key chicken-and-egg questions that have long puzzled biologists:

How did the first cell arise without a pre-existing cell to make it? How did the first protein, the first enzyme, appear without a pre-existing pattern to direct its synthesis and a pre-existing enzyme to smooth the way?

Today, biologists think information needed to form new proteins and living systems is contained in the genetic material of the nucleic acids. This information passes from one generation to the next as the acids are themselves replicated and handed on to new cells.

Fox thinks the first cells and proteins could have arisen and reproduced on their own without need for a nucleic acid information store. All the information needed to form proteinoids is contained in the chemical properties of their constituent amino acids, he observed. All the information needed to form microspheres is contained in the structure of proteinoids.

Since both processes appear to be nonrandom, Fox and Rohlfing told the symposium, it is correct to speak of a blueprint for self-assembly being involved.

Such self-assembly still plays an important role in life today, as D.J. Kushner illustrated for the symposium. He showed pictures of living viruses which are essentially nucleic acid molecules wrapped in protein overcoats.

In his examples, the protein overcoats assumed characteristic compositions and forms in what appears to be self-assembly of subunits. These subunits, which are chains of amino acids, seem to contain their own assembly information, Kushner said. They build the viral overcoat whether or not the nucleic acid is present.

The reason it seems marvelous that a protein or primitive cell could assemble itself, Fox said, is our ignorance of the dynamics of systems. Scientists and engineers know that systems can behave in ways far more complex than you would expect from merely studying their component parts.

Biochemists cannot yet predict, simply by studying amino acids and other basic life chemicals, the nature of the systems those simple chemicals can form. That is why the rise in life has seemed so marvelous, Fox said. He thinks all the information needed to form simple proteins and simple cells is inherent in the chemical potential of amino acids and their resultant protein compounds.

This concept of an inherent blueprint for life can be carried back to the very atoms which form the amino acid precursors. The same compounds of carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, and oxygen thought to have given rise to amino acids on the primitive earth now have been found in the interstellar dust clouds.

Dr. David Buhl of the U.S. National Radio Astronomy Observatory, a codiscoverer of interstellar formaldehyde, has pointed out that the very existence of such compounds in space suggests a strong chemical tendency for them to form. The interstellar environment is very harsh for such molecules. Yet there they are. Certainly, one could expect them to form under the less harsh conditions of a primordial planetary atmosphere whenever the appropriate elements occur.

Thus it is, Fox says, that, at the beginning of 1972, he feels he "can write a prescription for the rise of life." It begins with atoms of carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, and oxygen, which would have a strong tendency to form the precursors of amino acids on the primitive earth. Lightning strokes or other energizing processes would produce the amino acids from these raw materials.

The acids would assemble themselves into proteins and these would assemble themselves into primitive cells. Evolution would then elaborate this primitive living material into the sophisticated life forms we know today.

The blueprint for the entire process, from atoms to the first living cells, Fox says, would be inherent in the basic chemical forces. Viewed this way, the rise of organic life seems less of a statistical miracle and more of a chemical certainty than it ever has before.

Teacher Evaluation To Begin

A class evaluation sheet will be handed out to students at Redwood High School in Larkspur at the end of each semester in an attempt to improve communications at the school.

Student body president Scott Setrakian, responsible for the questionnaires, said a prime reason for the sheets is that "there are some cases of distinct and tragic differences between what the teachers are communicating in the form of classroom exercises and what students are expecting and understanding."

He said his plan is to make an evaluation sheet asking such questions as: "Did you like the way the subject matter was presented to the class?" or "Would you recommend this class to other students interested in learning this subject?"

Filling out the forms would be optional, and completed ones would be handed back to teachers to show the reactions to their teaching.

The system should be in effect by the end of the spring semester.

Off-Duty Officer Gets His Man

A Greenbrae man was free on $1,250 bail today after his arrest Sunday by a sharp-eyed and persistent off-duty San Francisco policeman driving home to Novato.

George William Casassa, 25, of 130 Via Lerida, was booked into Marin County Jail after the policeman spotted him in a Volkswagen van on which the officer had taken a stolen vehicle report earlier Sunday, Casassa is to appear in San Francisco Municipal Court next Tuesday.

San Francisco police said officer Howard Bergmark of Novato was on his way home at about 4 p.m. when he spotted the van on Lombard Street. He caught up with it at the Golden Gate Bridge toll plaza, flashed his badge and signaled for the driver to pull over.

Instead, the van sped off across the bridge, weaving in and out of traffic at speed in excess of 70 miles an hour, police said.

Bergmark again caught up with the van just south of the Tiburon Boulevard turnoff and again signaled for the driver to pull over, this time exhibiting his gun.

The vehicle stopped on the offramp, and two men jumped out of the car and began running.

When Bergmark yelled for them to stop, Casassa halted and was arrested, but the other man escaped, police said.

Exemption Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill to exempt land and buildings owned by veterans' organizations from property taxation has been introduced by Assemblyman Walter W. Power, D-Sacramento.

U.S. Continues Air War Buildup

SAIGON (UPI) —The U.S. command today reported an intensification of the air war against North Vietnamese missile and radar sites, and U.S. military sources said the Communists have moved tanks to within three miles of the Central Highlands city of Kontum.

South Vietnamese officials have predicted a major Communist offensive in Indochina to coincide with the Tet Lunar New Year in mid-February, apparently aimed at embarrassing President Nixon who visits Peking shortly after that.

Today, the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government called in a radio broadcast for the South Vietnameee people to rise up against the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu and demand a total U.S. troop withdrawal and the downfall of Thieu.

Official U.S. spokesmen gave no explanation for the new "protective reaction" strikes into North Vietnam but military sources said parts of the Ho Chi Minh trail were now as heavily defended as were Hanoi and Haiphong at height of the U.S. bombing from 1965 to 1968.

Military sources said the defenses had been built up along the Communist supply line to rush men and supplies southward for an offensive.

The major Communist strike was expected to be in the Central Highlands 180 miles north of Saigon despite saturation raids by B52s against Communist buildups along the area where South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia meet.

Students And Police In Stanford Ruckus

STANFORD (UPI) — A bloody nose was the only injury Monday as supporters of a fired radical professor broke into the old Student Union twice at Stanford University and raided the faculty Club.

Despite a series of confrontations and skirmishes with police there were no arrests on the campus where H. Bruce Franklin was fired for inciting students to violence. Deputies stayed on campus through the night.

Franklin, 37, made his first campus appearance since being suspended a year ago and urged students at a rally to "turn universities into places to train people to destroy the empire. . ."

Both times the avowed Maoist's followers broke into the old Student Union they were quickly driven off by six campus policemen and 40 Santa Clara county sheriff's deputies.

After the first dispersal the group poured into the nearby Faculty Club, startling professors at their evening meal and causing their hasty exit. The group remained about a half hour, some eating what food was available and others throwing bread around.

Crowd sizes varied during the demonstrations by the Stanford Rehabilitation Movement, an organization which includes non-students and which protests Franklin's dismissal and what it says is university involvement in the Vietnam War.

There were 800 at the noon rally, largest since the new year started, as Franklin challenged Stanford president Richard Lyman to "come out in the sunlight and debate."

Of those, 200 moved into the old Student Union and were driven out. An estimated 350 took part in the Faculty Club raid and about 275 took part in the night rally that led to the second attempt at the Union building.

Franklin, an associate professor of English and an expert on Herman Melville, was fired by university trustees Saturday on the recommendation of Lyman and a faculty committee which found he had incited violence with his campus speeches.

Quentin Still Seeking Guards

San Quentin prison officials say they still are seeking 35 new guards under a federally financed program designed to cut unemployment in the cities.

The program, called the Public Employee Program, provides jobs for many cities in the nation. Applicants for the job of correctional officer must be between the ages of 21 and 35, have the equivalent of a high school diploma and be service veterans during the Vietnam era.

Applicants must also qualify on grounds they are unemployed and disadvantaged. Prison officials said they seek more black and Mexican-American guards.

Pay ranges from $651 to $791 per month after three years.

Applications should be made to the state Human Resources Development Center in San Francisco at 1425 Turk Street by Friday.

State's Outgo Tops Intake

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — During the first half of the current fiscal year, the state spent almost $400 million more than it received, according to state Controller Houston I. Flournoy.

Flournoy reported Monday that general fund cash receipts for the first six months of fiscal 1971-72 were $1,996,307,687 while state expenditures were $2,382,765,320.

The income was up 7.81 per cent above the same period in the preceding fiscal year, Flournoy added and expenditures were 2.49 per cent higher.

Revenues Will Be Considered

A gloomy five-year projection of estimated revenues and expenditures by the Golden Gate Bridge District will be considered by the finance committee at 9 a.m. on Thursday in toll plaza offices.

The projection anticipates a $21 million deficit alone for next fiscal year, which would consume virtually its entire existing cash reserve unless a $12.6 million federal grant is approved for the district's ferry system.

The projection by Dist. Auditor Gordon E. Dahlgren also anticipates that annual operational deficits for bus and ferry operations will total $6 million by fiscal 1975-76. Of this, $4.1 million would be for the bus system and $1.9 million for the ferry system, he estimated.

Also on the agenda is a proposal to advertise for bids to start construction of the ferry fleet.

The regular meeting of the full board of directors will be at 10 a.m. on Friday, also in toll plaza offices.

THE PENTAGON PAPERS

Case Against Ellsberg Builds

By ROBIN WRIGHT
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON — Dr. Daniel Ellsberg stands a much greater chance of being convicted and sent to prison for leaking the Pentagon papers to the American press as a result of the 12 new indictments issued against him Dec. 30.

This opinion is the conclusion of law professors from five leading universities in the U.S. questioned about the recently expanded charges against the Massachusetts Institute of Technology researcher. A similar informal survey last July showed that the government case against Ellsberg was very weak because of several highly disputable points in the original charges.

Conviction could now mean up to 115 years in jail terms and $120,000 in fines. The original charges could have brought 10 years in prison and $50,000 in fines.

The outlook for Ellsberg's trial changed dramatically when the two original counts against him — theft of government property and intentionally endangering national security — were recast, and expanded by 10 new charges, including conspiracy. The same Los Angeles grand jury that first indicted him last July handed down the new charges.

The most dramatic change in the case, the legal scholars agree, is likely to be the effect of the new conspiracy charge, which also brings in Ellsberg's friend and Rand Corp. colleague Anthony J. Russo, Jr.

The conspiracy charge, besides carrying a heavier sentence, generally eases the burden of government proof, the lawyers explained. If the prosecution can adequately establish that the two defendants plotted to perform illegal acts, it need not prove every act it alleges the two committed.

The other new charges against Ellsberg, a former Department of Defense analyst, include not just the original count of stealing government property, but concealing unauthorized conveyance, and receiving stolen government property vital to the national defense.

Besides conspiracy, Russo was charged by the Los Angeles grand jury with three counts of receiving and unauthorized possession of stolen government property vital to the national defense. Previously he was not charged at all.

These are not considered by legal analysts to be more serious charges than the original indictment but just a form of insurance to the government.

"It sounds as if the government is covering itself by alleging illegal acts at different stages to assure a conviction on at least one count," one noted legal scholar commented.

In analyzing the case, lawyers, both constitutional and criminal, also cited some of the possible arguments and difficulties to be encountered by both the defense and prosecution when the trial starts in Los Angeles. It is tentatively scheduled to begin March 7, although a delay is expected.

Generally, they say the prosecution's case will be fairly straightforward: factually to prove that Ellsberg schemed, then reproduced — thereby stealing — the papers and alter turned the copies over to the press.

To prove Russo guilty, it will be necessary to show that he schemed, received, and had unauthorized control over the papers.

The Los Angeles grand jury also named but did not charge two co-conspirators: Lindy Sinay, a Los Angeles businesswoman, and Vu Van Thai, a former South Vietnamese ambassador who later became a consultant at the Rand Corp. where the Pentagon papers were written. All three are friends of Ellsberg.

There are, however, two areas that may present problems for the prosecution. To win its case, it is essential that the prosecution sufficiently prove:

1. The degree of complicity, if any, between Ellsberg and Russo. Proving to what extent Russo was involved in planning the actual use of the papers may be difficult.

If for example, his role as an accomplice in the planning stage cannot be proven, he then may take the legal status of Miss Sinay, who admitted she helped reproduce the papers but had no knowledge of the documents' future use.

This may be facilitated by the fact that Russo was not charged with stealing the papers, only receiving them.

2. The specific intent of the participants. The espionage and conspiracy charges against the two men require proof that the alleged offenders intended or had "reason to believe" that the documents could be used "to the injury of the United States or to the advantage of any foreign nation."

In the first place, Ellsberg has contended from the beginning that his actions have been to help rather than hurt the U.S.

Secondly, actually defining some of these words, technically and in terms of legal precedent, such as "injury," "national security," "national defense," and "advantage to a foreign nation" may be the prosecution's toughest job.

As one lawyer explained, "It's not simply a matter of what the government can rule illegal, but what it has already prohibited."

On the other hand, the legal scholars expect the defense case to be intricately interpretative rather than dependent on fact. Ellsberg has at several points announced that he hopes to make the trial into a major hearing on issues as varied as the legality of the war and government secrecy in general.

Experts point to two arguments important to the defense:

1. One, if not the major point of debate, will be that the whole classification operation is overly protective and that the Pentagon papers should never have

Chisholm Tosses Bonnet Into Ring

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Proclaiming herself "the candidate of the people," Rep. Shirley Chisholm formally announced today she will seek the Democratic presidential nomination.

The 47-year-old congresswoman made her declaration in her home area, Brooklyn, asserting she was not running as a black woman, or as a candidate of black America, or as a representative of Women's Lib.

"I am the candidate of the people and my presence before you now symbolizes a new era in American political history," she told a large crowd of supporters at the Concord Baptist Church in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Chisholm will enter at least four primaries —Florida, North Carloina, New York and California. She will enter slates of delegates in at least two others, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

She has drawn support for her preliminary campaigning from several women's groups, particularly the National Organization of Women (NOW.)

In Florida Monday, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace started his first campaign swing for the March 14 Democratic primary, declaring that "regardless of what some in the press say I am a serious candidate for President of the United States."

Wallace, who ran as the candidate of the American Independent party in 1968, said his slogan in Florida and the United States was going to be "big government, go home where you belong."

"The average citizen has been ignored except on tax paying day," Wallace said, "they've been ignored by both parties."

Earlier Monday, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, another Democratic entry in the Florida race, charged that Wallace was "out to make a shambles of the Democratic party." He said Wallace and the Republicans may "have made some kind of a sweetheart agreement down there" (in Florida.)

SHIRLEY CHISHOLM
'Candidate of people'

In other political developments:

—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, considered the front-runner among the Democrats, was expected today to receive the endorsement of Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp at Harrisburg. Muskie was endorsed Monday by Boston Mayor Kevin H. White.

—President Nixon welcomed Philadelphia's Democratic "law and order" Mayor Frank Rizzo to the White House with VIP treatment. The two men met for 45 minutes Monday and afterward Rizzo described Nixon as "one of the greatest presidents this country has ever had." Rizzo stopped short of endorsing Nixon, however. Rizzo met with Muskie last week, but his words of praise for the Maine Democrat were not so warm.

—Rep. John M. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, conservative challenger to Nixon for the Republican nomination, said that from past administration estimates the budget deficit for fiscal 1973 could be as much as $100 billion. Nixon's budget announced Monday showed a deficit of about $25.5 billion.

The Case Against Dr. Ellsberg Builds

The defense will probably bring in experts, such as the Pentagon staffer who testified before Congress that 99½ per cent of what is classified "secret" need not be.

An extension of this argument will be the testimony of journalists and other government officials who have openly had access to secret materials despite their classification.

2. The main obstacle to the defense, the outside lawyers contend, will be the conspiracy charge — not just the seriousness of the charge, but its implications and the government's probably technique of proof.

"The joint implication can't help but suggest guilt," one noted legal scholar admitted. "It will definitely have a psychological effect on both the public and the jury."

In bringing forth evidence in conspiracy, he said, "the government can bring forth information of doubtful relevancy because almost any statement or action from the past is admissible. This often can damage the defendant's image without proving any conspiratorial deed, which benefits the prosecution's case."

Apart from the obvious questions raised by the indictments, there are several other points suggested by actions of both the government and Ellsberg's lawyers which may offer further insight into what can be expected at the trial.

The first questions involves the indictment of Miss Sinay and Vu Van Thai, neither of whom was charged with a crime. Former U.S. Sen. Charles E. Goodell, head of the Ellsberg Defense Fund and one of his lawyers, said, "It's important to determine why those two were indicted but never formally charged. It's hard to see the purpose of it."

The indictment of Vu Van Thai hints at more than the listing of Miss Sinay. The charges are the former Vietnamese diplomat, now a United Nations consultant, received and possessed one volume of the papers.

The volume, which covers American strategy to end the war and obtain release of U.S. prisoners, is one of the four Ellsberg did not turn over to the press because of their sensitive content.

Lawyers speculate that Vu Van Thai may be used by the government to prove that Ellsberg's intent in releasing the papers was to the advantage of a foreign nation.

This could be documented by listing any contacts that Vu Van Thai, who has advocated a negotiated settlement since 1967, had with the North Vietnamese or the National Liberation Front. Vu Van Thai, it could then be implied, had the opportunity to pass on information from the secret papers to the enemy.

On the other side, points of interest from the defense include the issues of trial site and charges of government "hassling" of the defense.

Although the defense claims it now has no plans to request a change of venue from Los Angeles to Boston, it argued vehemently in favor of a Boston site during the pretrial hearings.

This unexpected change of heart, according to defense lawyers, is attributed to the new defendant, Russo, who lives in Los Angeles and is said to be penniless, and also to the fact that the U.S. district judge there, Matthew Byrne Jr., is already totally immersed in the case.

However, outside lawyers familiar with the case say these reasons don't outweigh the three factors that favor a Boston trial. They are the lower cost of travel for defense personnel; the likelikhood of a more sympathetic jury in Boston; and the more liberal panel of judges on the U.S. Court of Appeals here, which would hear the case if it were appealed. In California, the appeals judges are mostly Nixon appointees through Gov. Ronald Reagan and very conservative.

The other issue of interest is the hint that the government might be purposely annoying the defense. This suggestion was made both by Ellsberg's lawyers and legal scholars consulted about the case.

The most immediate example of this is the timing of the new indictments.

Anticipated much earlier by those close to the case, the new indictments came only six days before the pretrial hearing — scheduled last August — was to begin. As a result of the last-minute indictments, many of the defense motions and arguments were rendered moot.

She Sings, He Plucks 150 Strings

By THOR ECKERT JR.
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON — When the de Zayases travel, it is no small affair. They take eight seats on an airplane: one each for Mr. and Mrs. de Zayas and six for the rest of the family — seven or eight vihuelas (16th-Century guitar), lutes, guitars, and a theorbo.

Santiago Rodrigo de Zayas-Enriquez y Harrison (to give his full name) and his wife Anne Perret, have been in the United States since September of last year on their first recital tour of this country. They've been traveling quite a bit. And almost everywhere they've gone they have performed to "sold-out-plus" houses.

He plays and she sings Renaissance and Baroque music — a musical era that a few years ago would have drawn a mere handful of listeners.

But now, a Renaissance "renaissance" is taking place.

The de Zayases are not surprised. It is logical, they say, because the "old" music is the closest to the current folk music that the "classical" world has yet produced — folk music's great granddaddy, as it were.

And the de Zayases perform it well.

In fact, the number of "old" instruments Rodrigo de Zayas plays is staggering. He plucks some 150 different strings in any given concert: anything from the five choir (10 string) Baroque guitar to the 13 choir (25 string) Baroque lute to the 14 choir (27 string) theorbo. (A choir is a "voice," or what would be one string on a modern guitar. In all of these early instruments every string except the highest-pitched one was doubled.) Each involves a different playing technique.

After studying art history and harmony in Paris (before that he had studied virtuoso guitar, taught illiterates in the Spanish armed forces, and gone to law school), de Zayas began researching forgotten performance techniques and styles in most of the major music libraries in the Western world. This search led to a precise knowledge of style, phrasing, and fingering for all the instruments he plays.

He first heard Anne Perret in 1968. She had been signed on at the Marseille Opera after winning first prize in voice at the National Conservatory in Aix-on-Provence, France.

He recognized in her voice the quality he was looking for.

She was totally enchanted with the music he played.

They decided on a musical partnership (which a short while later became a marriage partnership as well).

It meant Miss Perret had to be "retrained," for the operatic voice is meant to carry over a large orchestra. The Renaissance voice "must never overpower the instrument accompanying it" — it becomes merely another "choir" of the instrument in the performance of many of the songs.

In concert the de Zayas family is striking, both visibly — this handsome couple surrounded by remarkable instruments —and aurally —the combination of a vibrant mezzo-soprano with the firm yet delicate lute or vihuela and the ripe theorbo.

Not all of a recital involves singing, however. De Zayas does solos. The most interesting are his Bach selections; he is the only performing lutenist today to play the music on the instrument it was specifically written for — the 13-choir Baroque lute.

His instruments are made by the Vera Brothers in Madrid. None are copies — "just as no violins made today are copies of a Stradivarius. They are creations in cypress and rosewood," de Zayas said.

The end product is a lute or vihuela much like that played four centuries ago. However, in order to be heard in a concert hall, the soundboard meets modern specifications for resonance and carrying power.

The most impressive example of the quality of sound is in the monstrous theorbo, with its 27 strings. The sound is rich and covers an unusually wide range — much like an organ, which it resembles on a smaller volume scale.

The hole through which sound is projected from these instruments is carved, in rosette style, directly out of the soundboard. With as many as 450 tiny holes and not one straight line, these miniature carvings are an impressive decoration addition to the instruments.

De Zayas spends eight to nine hours a day with his various instruments, keeping his fingers nimble, and sharpening the set of instinctive reflexes each separate instrument demans. "If I favored one instrument in practice," he says, "I might use those reflexes on a different instrument in a moment of 'crisis.' "

Some crises are unavoidable. One evening in Columbia, Mo., a string broke during a solo. De Zayas's honest reaction and calm string change won over what had been a somewhat cool audience.

That same sincerity and his interest in the music he plays come through when you're talking with him too.

Mrs. de Zayas works with her husband at different times during the day perfecting synchronization and rhythm. Otherwise she vocalizes about two hours with her electric organ.

Often the Zayases spend more than an hour after the performance answering surprisingly technical questions about the instruments and performance customs of the musical era. For Anne Perret, this is no longer a problem. She has learned to speak English remarkably well in a short period of time. De Zayas's mother is American so he has never had any trouble with the language.

Incarcerated Girls Earn, Pay Taxes

CLERMONT, Ind. — How's that again? Many residents of the Indiana Girls' School help pay the tax bill for their own incarceration? Right.

In a unique program, 16-and 17-year-old girls confined to the institution take part in a work-study program and are paid $1.60 an hour. Of course, their earnings are taxable.

Since the program was initiated five years ago, the 297 girls who have participated have earned more than $60,000. One left the school with earnings of $1,500 and another went home with $850.

Says Mary E. Hanna, coordinator of volunteer services:

"The chance to be self-sustaining through the earnings of money and on-the-job training has been the least of the benefits from this forward program. It has kept girls continuing their education who might otherwise have quit because of a lack of motivation. It has been a deterrent to bad behavior and going AWOL.

"Some employers have hesitated to hire our 'graduates,' most of whom are serving time as runaways and truants. They soon find out that our girls are reliable employees. Only 12 girls who have taken part have failed to keep up grade standards."

One Objection To Floating Dock

An objection to a proposed floating dock in Corte Madera Creek off Larkspur Plaza Road has been received by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Evan Hong of the corps said an objection from the Marin Conservation League was the only one received within the allowable 30-day period which ended Saturday.

The league wanted the creek protected from powerboats, Hong said.

He said Col. Charles R. Roberts, district engineer, must now decide whether the plan of Shareholders Capital Programs of Emeryville is controversial enough to warrant a hearing.

Additional Time Wanted Over Land

The Sausalito School District board decided last night it needed more time to study a proposal that the district give up five acres of land it owns in Marin City, Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg reported.

The land, northeast of the Manzanita School, is part of 5.75 acres given to the district in 1960 by the Marin County Housing Authority for construction of an elementary school.

Since the district has never used the land, Wallace K. Shepherd, authority executive director, has asked that the district declare it surplus and return it to the agency.

The board directed its facilities committee, headed by trustee Warren K. Hansen, to study the matter and report back.

Trustees also agreed to meet with representatives of the Marin City Learning Center after the Feb. 1 trustee election to review the center's long-standing request to use the Manzanita School for its classes.

Earlier this month the board refused to reconsider its Sept. 20 decision to deny the private school's request to use the empty school.

Learning center representatives picked district offices yesterday in opposition to the denial.

The Sausalito School District board also:

BUDGET — Agreed to hold a special meeting at a date and time to be announced to discuss the district's anticipated income for 1972-73.

CLOSED SESSION — Met for 30 minutes in closed session to instruct its negotiator, the superintendent, in dealings with employee associations.

INSURANCE — Paid a $2,600 premium for insurance for Martin Luther King and Bayside schools.

APPOINTEES — Appointed three persons to serve as committee chairmen for the campaign for the March 7 tax election: Barbara Levy, voter information; Barbara Harris, publicity, and Betty Times, endorsements.

Buildings' Rent Hikes Approved

The Rohnert Park Recreation Commission last night approved increases for rental of community buildings.

Recreation Director James Pekkain said the commission approved a new fee structure for use of the community center and Benecia Recreation Center from the present $30 per day to $50 per day for city residents and $100 per day for nonresidents.

The recommended fee increases will go to the city council for consideration at its Feb. 7 meeting.

The Rohnert Park Recreation Commission also:

BONDS — Named Nancy Mettert and Elmer Hamann as co-chairmen of a steering committee for the $695,000 park bond election April 11. The first committee meeting will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

BASEBALL — Recommended that $350 be given to the Babe Ruth Baseball League for new uniforms and equipment and agreed to support formation of a senior league for boys between the ages of 16 and 18.

CHESS — Heard that a chess club has been formed and will meet on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to noon at Benecia Recreation Center.

Parcel Is Rezoned Swim Club

The Mill Valley Planning Commission last night cleared the way for construction of the Scott Valley Swim and Tennis Club by rezoning half-acre parcel at the end of Underhill Road from planned residential to open area.

The panel also approved a use permit to allow the sale of beer and wine at Piper's Bag Fish and Chips restaurant, 25 Miller Avenue.

In the only other action, the commission approved a variance to allow Renato Sottile to reduce both sideyard setbacks from five feet to 2.5 feet and another variance to waive a requirement for two off-street parking spaces for a house at 95 Lovell Avenue.

The commission made the variances conditional on approval of the house's design by the city's architectural advisory committee.

Bill On Hiking Pay To Guards

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation to grant state prison guards a $12 million salary increase and make their pay equal to that of highway patrolmen was introduced Monday by Sen. H. L. Richardson, R-Arcadia.

Richardson said the pay increase for an estimated 4,500 guards would be "commensurate with the dangers that they face."

He recalled that nine guards were killed last year "and at least 100 maimed and injured at the hands of our prison population."

Bill Would Require Headlight Use

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill which would require motorcycles to be operated with their headlights on during the day has been introduced in the Assembly.

Assemblyman Ernest Lacoste, D-Modesto, who introduced the measure Monday, said it was intended to make the motorcycles more visible to other motorists.

Workshop Slated In Lagunitas

The Lagunitas School District board agreed last night to hold a workshop tomorrow with teachers to review the district's educational program, according to Supt. William E. Johnson.

At its Jan. 10 meeting, the board agreed to have a minimum teaching day once a week so teachers could organize their work for the school.

The first minimum teaching day will be the workshop with the board at 2:15 p.m. tomorrow at San Geronimo School to go over such things as the team-teaching program, staffing in the school and needs of the pupils, Johnson said.

The Lagunitas School District board also:

TRUSTEE — Officially seated trustee Richard C. Sloan, elected earlier this month to fill the unexpired term of Eugene Di Baslio, who had resigned.

POLICY — Received a report from Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino that the district should have a policy regarding what types of literature may be distributed in school. The district had sent pamphlets home with students on a candidates night, and a question on the property of the move.

CLOSED MEETING — Held a closed meeting to consider firing an employee, but decided against it, according to Board President Gary T. Giacommini.

Pleads Innocent To Charge Of Burglary

Judge Alexander J. McMahon set bail at $5,000 and scheduled a preliminary hearing for Feb. 4. Hall was arrested Saturday on suspicion of burglarizing a home on Petaluma Boulevard South.

Larkspur Zoning Plan Due Airing

A draft for a zoning ordinance for apartment areas of Larkspur — long sought by enemies of recent development — will get its first airing before the city planning commission today.

The commission will consider an ordinance draft by city planning consultant Sydney H. Williams at 8 p.m. in city hall.

Williams' proposal keeps the existing requirement of 2,000 square feet per dwelling unit, but promises to reduce density by another means; namely, an open space requirement absent in the existing ordinance.

Williams woud require 600 square feet of usable open space per dwelling. Usable open space is defined as fairly flat land, accessible to residents and designed for recreation use. Balconies can be used to meet up to 25 per cent of Williams's requirements.

Multiple residential — specifically R-3 — zoning has been the focus of a lengthy debate among citizens, the planning commission and the town council. The controversy surfaced most recently in discussion last month of a 224-unit development to be built by Larwin Multi-Housing Corp. atop Bon Air Hill.

The planning commission turned it down, but the city council, believing the development met all requirements of the existing zoning ordinance, approved it.

Williams then was asked to draft an alternate ordinance to the one in force since 1962.

Bay Labor Aide Will Quit 22-Year Post

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — George W. Johns of San Rafael, secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council, announced last night he will retire from the post March 13.

Johns has held the post 22 years, taking office when his predecessor, former San Francisco Mayor John F. Shelley, was elected to Congress. He formerly was a member of the San Francisco Planning Commission, board of education and the charter revision commission.

The labor official, who is 63, had said repeatedly in recent months he would not run for another two-year tem in the $25,000-a-year post. He lives at 161 Canal Street.

Johns made his announcement last night at the opening of nominations for labor council offices. He nominated his assistant, John F. Crowley, as secretary.

Johns was a witness in November 1970 in a federal district court trial arising from the strike against the Independent-Journal by San Francisco Local 21 of the International Typographical Union. Johns told how strikers were supported by a committee of union men from throughout the Bay Area.

The trial resulted in convictions for civil and criminal contempt against four unions and their leaders in staging secondary boycotts against I-J advertisers.

The San Francisco Labor Council also is a defendant in a $12 million damage suit brought by the I-J last month against six Bay Area labor organizations and many of their officers and members. The trial is pending in Marin Superior Court.

Members Of Chavez Union Protest Nine Wine Labels

Representatives of the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, some setting up picket lines, have reappeared at several Marin County stores in an effort to have nine wine brands removed from shelves.

Ten to 13 pickets, wearing the red armbands and carrying the red and black flag of Cesar Chavez's union, marched for about 90 minutes at Guasco's Market in San Anselmo Saturday.

Union supporters also appeared twice at another San Anselmo store, Ludwig's Liquor and Smoke Shop, but did not picket.

Union supporters spoke with employees at Petrini's at the Bon Air Shopping Center, Greenbrae, and the Quality Liquor Store in Fairfax.

The union, whose supporters have been appearing sporadically in Marin, contends grapes for the nine wines are picked by nonunion farm workers.

Another Try On Pot Status

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assemblyman William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights, has again put before the legislature a bill to change the legal classification of marijuana from a narcotic to a "restricted dangerous drug."

A similar bill was vetoed last year by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Campbell said Monday the measure also would conform California drug classifications to federal law. It would not change any of the penalties regarding possession or sale of marijuana.

Some Retailers Under Fire For Interest Rates

OAKLAND (UPI)—Some retailers in the state are charging customers "25 per cent, 50 per cent, even 100 per cent interest" on unpaid charge accounts, according to a Los Angeles attorney.

Marshall Grossman, a lawyer representing a group of consumers, made the charge Monday in an opening statement in a class action suit against seven California retail stores.

He said the excessive interest rates occur when stores fail to give customers credit for payments made or merchandise returned, when they commute monthly interest charges.

The suit claims the stores should deduct payments made on merchandise returned before compiling interest.

Firemen Change Minds On Meeting

An adjourned meeting of the Corte Madera Town Council called for last night was cancelled at the last minute at the request of the town's volunteer firemen.

The firemen had asked for the meeting to air unspecified complaints, but changed their minds yesterday for an unidentified reason, according to Town Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels.

PROJECT EMPLEO

Breakthrough At Quentin

By LARRY MOWELL

Empleo is a Spanish word meaning occupation, profession or aim, but it means much more to a group of Mexican-American inmates at San Quentin prison.

The men say it means a chance for them to understand their culture and overcome the language barrier that isolates them from the mainstream of American life.

They say it means a chance to qualify for prison apprenticeships, jobs and even college when paroled. To a few, it means a chance to write home for the first time.

But to some guards and prison officials, the picture is not so rosey. Juan Alcedo, director of Project EMPLEO, charged prison administrators below the warden have tried to hamstring the educational program for Mexican-American inmates. Guards have shared the hostility, he said.

Keith W. Hayball, supervisor of correctional education programs, denied any prejudice exists. "It is the desire of the warden and the staff to make that program go," he said.

But at least one guard, who declined to divulge his identity, admitted hostility. He said the classes are merely long gripe sessions — at best not very constructive, at worst a forum for revolutionary activity. Alcedo denied the claims.

Despite the opposition, Alcedo and the inmates in his charge said the school has had a great deal of success in its first year.

EMPLEO is an acronym for El Mejicano Preparado, Listo, Educado y Organizado, a motto that has been translated into the first school in the California prison system tailored strictly for Mexican-American inmates, Alcedo said.

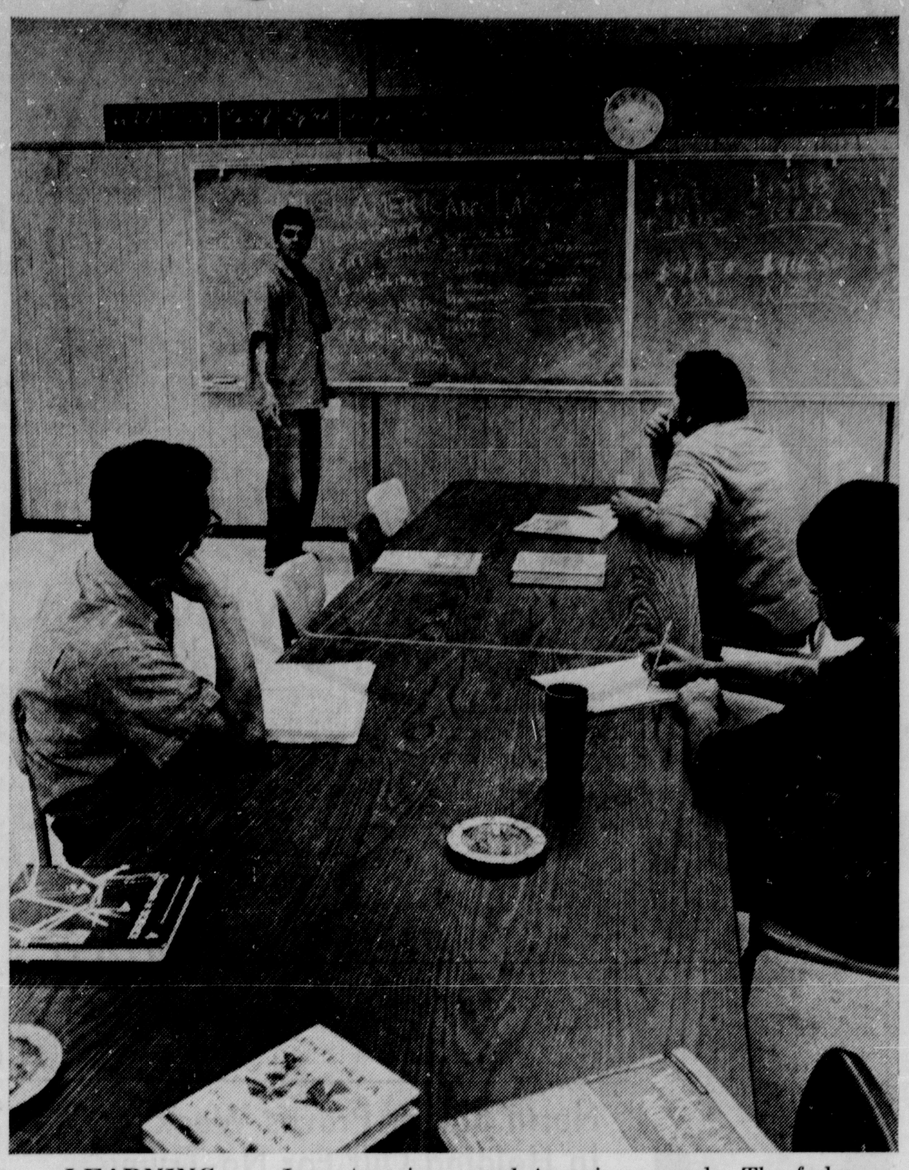
(Self Advancement Through Education (SATE) has existed for several years as a program to encourage black inmates to become educated, but the program has not had its own school.)

Six of the EMPLEO students interviewed unanimously proclaimed the value of the program.

"Now in here (the school) you know all about where you really came from," 29-year-old Leonard Elias, in prison for fraud, said. "It gives you a pride inside and it gives you an extra drive to learn more about your culture," he said.

"I wanted to switch to my language. I wanted to switch to the education of my kind," Freddie Flores, 28, said.

Alcedo points to learning achievements. Since the doors of three portable classrooms opened to students in April, Alcedo said, about six of the 65 or so inmates that have studied there learned to read and write.



—LEARNING — Inmates in Project EMPLEO's literacy class at San Quentin listen attentively as an unidentified inmate tutor explains a list of Spanish and American words. The federally funded education program has been labelled a success by its director, although it has never had capacity classes.

Five or six others attained an eighth grade education which qualified them for apprenticeship and two others graduated from high school. Three parolees have gone on to college "and supposedly are doing well," Alcedo said.

Hayball confirmed the two high school diplomas, but had no information on the other figures. He said a full report on the program is due next month.

The ethnic education program is financed for a year by a $123,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Labor under the Manpower Development Training Act. Alcedo said he expects another $115,000 to carry the school into 1973. After that, financing is uncertain.

The school is split into three classes, each with a capacity of 15. The first is a literacy class, the second offers an eighth grade education and the third meets the criteria for a high school diploma, Alcedo said.

Inmates assigned to the program study weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in three brightly colored temporary classrooms — a splash of cheer dwarfed by the dull colors of the permanent prison buildings.

Hayball said the classes are more closely watched than most in the Bayview Schools. He said he and other supervisors have sat in on classes that seemed to be instructive, not gripe sessions as feared by some guards.

Inside the classrooms, the tables are cluttered with textbooks in Spanish and English and the walls are hung with posters — mostly in Spanish — proclaiming the beauties of Mexicans and their culture.

Although the Mexican-American percentage of the prison's 2,000 inmates is maintained at 16 to 18 per cent by the Department of Corrections, Spanish language and Mexican culture classes in the prison school system have been few, according to Joseph R. O'Brien, prison information officer.

Alcedo said that situation also prevails in the public school system, so the school has had to scour the country for appropriate texts and curricula.

A second initial problem was finding three qualified bilingual teachers, Alcedo said, but the greatest obstacle has been resistance by prison officials.

He said the school was shut down for two months after the Aug. 21 escape attempt in which three inmates and three guards were killed.

Hayball said, however, the school was shut for two or three weeks, the same period of time the whole school system was shut down.

Since that time only three of 14 applicants have been sent to the school by a three-man classification committee which doles out inmates to the various jobs and activities in the prison, Alcedo said.

Hayball admitted that might be true, but said EMPLEO now has 40 inmates. "That speaks pretty well with our decline in population," he said.

He said enrollment in all schools has been cut back with declining population because essential jobs like serving meals and in some cases, learning a trade, take precedence.

But Alcedo said such prejudicial practices have plagued the program all along. He said the classrooms were "trashed" — posters torn down, books strewn about, the ceilings ripped out — by a "goon squad" searching for weapons after the Aug. 21 bloodbath. Alcedo suspected prejudice against the program was the motive.

O'Brien said the buildings were searched, but the guards involved had denied any vandalism. He said other inmates might have been responsible although almost all were locked up at the time.

Before the violence, Alcedo said, the program never reached its capacity of 45 although more than enough inmates applied.

"I think it is seen as a potential source of problems," Alcedo said.

He said the classification board tells the inmates the school is worthless and tries to channel them into jobs. Inmates confirmed the attempts to sidetrack them, but said they keep trying.

Perserverance seems to be a key ingredient in the program. After years of interracial warring among five Mexican cliques called tips, the Mexican-American inmates decided to unite and worked for three years to set up the school program, Alcedo said.

EMPLEO has an inmate committee which screens applicants to the school, he said. The school, although independently funded, is part of the Bayview Schools system sponsored at the prison by the Marin County Schools Office.

But inmates are responsible for its success or failure. Each class has two inmate tutors and each class maintains good behavior in the school through self-policing, Alcedo said.

"I've never had a beef down here since April," he said.

Water Rate Is Approved For Bolinas

Increased water rates for customers in Bolinas have been approved by the community public utility district.

Rates for the first 1,000 cubic feet of water per two-month billing period were raised from $7 to $10, clerk Helen McKay reported.

Under the new rate schedule adopted Saturday, which will take effect in February, anything over 1,000 cubic feet will cost users 75 cents per 100 cubic feet.

The old rates were 50 cents per 100 cubic feet between 1,000 and 3,000 cubic feet, and 35 cents per 100 cubic feet over 3,000 cubic feet.

Mrs. McKay said three persons walked out of the meeting after directors voted 3-1 for the new rates. Board president Marguerite K. Harris did not attend.

A minority of a committee appointed to recommend new water rates favored a declining rate structure but higher rates than now are in effect. This proposal was rejected by the board, Mrs. McKay said.

In other business, the board began consideration of how it will pay approximately $237,000 owed to Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco for engineering work on the now-defunct $8.1 million sewage treatment plan for Bolinas and Stinson Beach.

The Marin County Counsel's office has suggested the district hire a combination engineer-accountant to go over the bill with the engineers.

Mrs. McKay said the board asked director W. Fred Wade to find out if the district's accounting firm, Meezer and Eckhoff of San Rafael, will perform the task, and report back to the board at its meeting tomorrow.

Petaluma Discusses Library Bond Vote

The Petaluma City Council agreed last night that another try for a library bond election may be the long-range solution for crowding problems, but ac knowledged that a branch library could solve short-range problems.

In a joint session with the city library board, the council agreed that plans to build an addition to the old library at Fourth and B streets would not be practical.

Architect Eugene Crawford said a 6,500-square-foot addition to the rear of the library, built in 1906, would cost about $316,000, although the figure could be lowered by deleting a planned $20,000 elevator and a meeting room.

Kenneth M. Wightman, library board chairman, recommended against the addition, saying funds would be etter spent for a new library in a more central location. He said the last library bond issue failed in 1965, but the time may be right to return to the voters since the city's population has increased greatly and many young families have moved to the eastside.

Richard Courier and fellow members of the Petaluma Valley Homeowners Association supported Wightman, but urged that an eastside branch be established as an interim solution until a new building is completed.

Librarian Alice M. Hanna said a branch library could open with 8,000 books and require a full-time staff of two. Operating costs were estimated at more than $40,000 per year.

Miss Hanna said the library now has a collection of 41,000 books, but said a more realistic figure for the city would be 60,000.

She said that although federal funds are not readily available, Petaluma may be eligible for a grant because great need could be shown.

The council scheduled action on the library issue for Feb. 7.

In other business at the study session, the council heard Sonoma County Assessor Ernest L. Comalli explain that new planning measures to restrict growth would not immediately lower taxes for property owners whose land is close to development.

He said that while the council may restrict zoning for some land, he could not reduce tax assessments unless the market value decreases.

The council told Comalli that some properties around Petaluma have been taxed on the basis of imminent development, although the new council policy would greatly restrict and delay development.

Comalli said that planning and zoning mesaures may begin to have some effect on the market value, but that only time will tell if the city remains consistent in its restrictions.

He said the coknecil could permit property owners to use the Williamson Act by placing their land in an agricultural preserve for 10 years to take advantage of lower tax rates.

CORTE MADERAN HELPS WOMAN ESCAPE FIRE

A Corte Madera housewife used a hammer to rescue her upstairs neighbor from a natural gas explosion and fire yesterday, firemen reported.

The blast came at 1:50 p.m. as Margary Fenzl of 28 Edison Avenue was attempting to ignite a stove pilot light. She tried unsuccessfully to extinguish the fire with baking soda and water, then fled into her bedroom because of the intense smoke.

Her neighbor, Gloria North of 30 Edison Avenue, smashed the bedroom window with a claw hammer and helped Mrs. Fenzl escape to safety.

Firemen estimated damage at $10,000 to the contents and the building, owned by Graham McPhail.

2nd-Dwelling Report Due Tonight In Hub

A planning commission report on a citizens committee recommendation that second dwellings be allowed on some single-family lots will be considered by the San Anselmo City Council when it meets at 8 p.m. today at city hall.

The commission report says the commission was unable to make an "intelligent and detailed analysis" of the citizens committee recommendation without an overall housing element plan for San Anselmo.

The commission urged the council to appoint another citizens committee to work on preparation of a housing element plan according to state guidelines.

The plan for second dwellings, prepared by the Citizens Committee on Zoning and Housing, was based on the committee's belief that allowing second residences in some cases would provide low-cost housing in the city.

Redwood Creek Producing Salmon

Within the next few days, Muir Woods National Monument outside Mill Valley will offer more than giant redwood stands for visitor viewing.

Supt. Leonard A. Frank said yesterday spawning salmon are running in Redwood Creek that snakes through the park.

"The rangers counted up to 30 in the creek this morning," Frank said yesterday.

Novato Schools Hit By Vandals

Vandals struck at two Novato schools during the past weekend, causing damage totaling $550, police said.

At Hamilton School, three classrooms were entered, glue was poured onto floors, rubber bands, white beans and paper cups were thrown about, black and blue paint was poured and sprayed about and obscenities were painted on walls, police said. Damage was estimated at $250.

At West Novato School, eight windows were broken, with the loss estimated at $300.

Belvedere Plans Control Of Dogs

Belvedere is getting ready to crack down on dirty dogs and their owners.

An ad hoc committee on dog problems last night proposed to the city council that dog-walking for toilet purposes be confined to four areas — and the owners must pick up after their pets or face fines.

Committee chairman Charles Auerbach also said the group favored revision of the city's rules to require that a dog be kept under control at all times, tighter wording on biting cases and a widespread public information campaign to make better neighbors out of dogs and their owners.

An audience of 15 persons produced mixed reactions to the suggestions.

Mayor Thomas S. Price said last night's discussion was merely to sample public opinion. A draft of the proposed ordinance changes will be considered by the coundil Feb. 7.

Auerbach's committee proposed dog exercise areas on the cove side of Beach Road between the yacht club and Main Street, the bay side of San Rafael Avenue between Tiburon Highway and West Shore Road, the Peninsula Land Co. lot at Beach and Peninsula roads and state land adjoining the bicycle path. The city would provide litter cans for disposal of the droppings.

An uncooperative owner's dog may be impounded after the third offense, Auerbach recommended.

A complex proposed definition of "under control" said that a dog must be not more than 500 feet from his house unless accompanied by a responsible person, and must be trained not to dirty private property or public areas where it would be a nuisance.

Duane B. Beeson of 99 West Shore Road declared dogs should be free to roam more than 500 feet. Mrs. Edwin J. Dreschsel, wife of a council member, favored keeping dogs under control at all times.

Mrs. Donald W. Davis of 1 Bellevue Avenue complained that dogs had knocked her down on the bicycle trail. The council said the trail is in Tiburon, but that the problem would be referred to Tiburon officials.

If adopted, the toilet control dog ordinance would put Belvedere — one of Marin's smallest cities — in line with New York and other metropolitan areas that have been wrestling with the problem of making owners responsible for clean-ups.

Boy Found Dead In Messy Room

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Police answering a disturbance complaint in a Haight-Ashbury District apartment Monday found utter destruction," a slain youngster and a bleeding man in a bathtub with running water.

Lt. Charles Ellis, who heads the homicide division, said the hippie-style apartment was a scene of "utter destruction— dishes broken all over the floor and food strewn all over."

In the bathtub, which contained a broken bottle, was a man identified by a driver's license as Ken Tuckey James, 25, no address. There were cuts on his face and chest and Ellis said he was incoherent and suffering "some kind of withdrawal."

On a coach was the body of Christopher Ley, 5, who had been dead several hours and who police said had possibly been strangled.

The boy's father, Timothy Ley, a computer operator who had rented the apartment, was found in the basement of a building next door and was taken in to custody for questioning.

North Bidder Proves Weak In Holding Out For No-Trump

The man who wants to play every hand is unpopular unless he's playing for high stakes. Less unpopular, but almost as much of a liability, is the weak sister who lets partner make all the decisions.

Opening lead — ♡ 6

VERY REASONABLE

South bid his hand very reasonably. He showed both suits and then suggested notrump. He wasn't willing to play spades unless North was able to insist on that suit.

Everybody at the table except North knew that South had two-five-card suits, a doubleton in the unbid hearts and a singleton in spades. West acted on this knowledge by opening the six of hearts against the final contract of three notrump.

East put up the queen, and South won with the king. The situation was quite hopeless. Declarer led a low club toward dummy, losing the jack to East's queen. The defenders then rattled off five heart tricks, and South was down two before he even started.

SPADES BETTER

North could hardly lose the game at spades even if he misguessed the hearts. He would lose only two hearts and a spade. With a normal guess in hearts, North would make 11 tricks at spades.

The bidding should have made this pretty clear to North. His hand would be worth at least four tricks at a spade contract but might be almost worthless at notrump. He could handle the spades even if South had a low singleton instead of the king or ace.

CLUE TO CONTRACT

The solidity of the spades was the clue to the best contract. North would have to settle for three no-trump if his spades were headed by queen-jack without the ten and nine; but his actual holding should have dictated a spade contract instead of non-trump.

DAILY QUESTION

You have opened with one diamond, and partner has raised to two diamonds.

It i now up to you again, holding:

♠ - A
♥ - K 9
♦ - A J 9 3 2
♣ - A K 8 6 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three clubs.

After a raise, a bid in a new suit is forcing for one round. If partner can show a little enthusiasm, you will bid a slam; otherwise you will stop at game in diamonds.

Dinner Would Benefit Bangladesh

Petaluman Is January 'Officer'

State parole officer Frank Q. Gifford of Petaluma has been named January "Peace officer of the month" by the Sonoma County Board of realtors.

Gifford, 48, was honored at a banquet last week. He attended College of Marin and received a bachelor's degree in psychology from San Francisco State College in 1951.

Gifford worked as a correctional officer and counselor at San Quentin Prison until 1962 when he became a parole agent. He returned to San Quentin in 1965 as a counselor in the adjustment center until two years ago when he resumed parole work.

Gifford has worked in the Santa Rosa parole office for a year.

He and his wife, Beverly, have two children.

Astrology History Will Be Discussed

Ruth Moscrop, a Novato astrologer and teacher, will discuss the history of astrology at a discussion program for adults and teen-agers at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Novato branch of the Marin County Library.

Mrs. Moscrop also will talk about signs, symbols and planets of the zodiac.

Breakfast Benefit For High School

A pancake breakfast and car wash will be held Feb. 5 from 8 a.m. to noon in the San Rafael High School cafeteria to help finance a tour of five performing groups of the school's music department.

The groups are the orchestra, a capella choir, chamber choir, symphonic band and jazz ensemble.

$1 Million Phone Updating Planned

More than $1.6 million will be spent by Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Marin County this year to improve telephone service and keep pace with anticipated service demands, according to John H. Dills, vice president and general manager.

The money will be spent in San Rafael, Mill Valley and Larkspur-Corte Madera in a variety of projects. Altogether, $155 million will be spent by the utility in the Bay Area for construction projects.

In San Rafael, the utility will spend $1 million on four projects. It will purchase land for a new building to house a Traffic Service Position System designed to improve operator-handled calling, install a new turbine for standby power designed to insure service from the San Rafael main office, and add to a building and to subscriber line circuits and toll trunks in the area.

In Mill Valley, the utility will spend $350,000 for growth and modernization, and $260,000 in the Larkspur-Corte Madera area to expand toll-call facilities.

Companywide, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph, will spend about $888 million to provide basic phone services and provide for new services during the coming year.

Four More Decline Berrigan Case Duty

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—Four potential jurors in the trial of the Harrisburg Seven had second thoughts today and told the judge they had opinions that might prejudice their fairness.

The four were dismissed, along with another prospective juror who pleaded personal hardship because he was only temporarily employed.

The four who said they had prejudices had not answered Monday when Federal Judge R. Dixon Herman had asked if anyone had opinions on either side of the case against the Rev. Philip F. Berrigan and six other antiwar activists who are charged with plotting to kidnap presidential aide Henry A. Kissinger, to blow up the Washington, D. C. heating ducts, and to vandalize draft boards.

Thirty-eight of the first 84 prospective jurors had been dismissed Monday for personal prejudice.

The morning session was spent in separate questioning by the judge of 46 veniremen on such general information as employment, and marital status.

Bank Of America Cuts Prime Interest Rate

NEW YORK (UPI)—The cost of borrowing money for consumers, businesses and banks dropped again Monday.

The Bank of America, the world's largest bank, announced that it had cut its prime interest rate 1-4 point to 4 3-4 per cent. The bank also cut its base rate for conventional home mortgages to seven per cent.

Bank of America President A. W. Clausen said the decline in the prime rate —the interest a bank charges its most creditworthy business borrowers — and in the mortgage rate made it necessary to reduce the rate paid to savers. On Feb. 1, the interest the Bank of America pays on regular savings goes down 1-2 point to 4 per cent.

The Bank of America's cut of the prime rate follows similar action in recent weeks by some New York and other banks.

Clausen said the interest paid by his bank on long term savings would remain the same.

Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago and Provident Bank of Chicago also cut their prime rates Monday. The Crocker National Bank of San Francisco cut its mortgage rate on Friday.

Panel Picked To Study Water Needs

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — A 22-member study commission to look at long-range water needs was appointed yesterday by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors.

The panel is scheduled to bring progress reports to the board in March and June with final recommendations to be made in September.

The board decided to appoint the commission after conservation and taxpayer groups opposed plans by the board to issue $115 million in revenue bonds to finance large-scale water projects. Most of the bonds are to finance Sonoma's share of the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct Project — killed in Marin by Marin Municipal Water District voters.

Southern Sonomans named to the commission were Petaluma City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer, Rohnert Park City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan, James Groom of Rohnert Park and John J. King of Petaluma. Representatives of conservation groups include Dr. Bradford Lundborg and Iva Warner.

Supervisors said the commission should also include citizens to be named by each water district, as well as representatives of prime water users.

22-Year-Old Stays Out Of Prison

Kenneth Wilkes Bright, 22, of San Rafael, yesterday was termed "very involved in the drug market" by a judge who said that only his earlier good record had kept him out of state prison.

Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court reluctantly went along with a plea bargain made in the case by another judge and sent Bright to county jail for six months.

The young man earlier had admitted selling narcotics and marijuana, while charges of selling other drugs and narcotics were dismissed at the time of his guilty pleas.

He was arrested last June by a narcotics agent who said an undercover man had bought drugs from Bright and another man on seven occasions.

Judge Broderick yesterday remanded Bright into custody despite the man's request he not start his sentence for a week.

The judge also placed Bright on probation for three years, ordered him to submit to testing to determine if he is using drugs and also said that his car or home may be searched at any time without a search warrant.

Bright's codefendant, Clayton Stephen Anderson, also a 22-year-old San Rafael man, is to be sentenced next Monday.

Warrant Out On Failure To Appear

A bench warrant with $5,000 bail was issued yesterday in Marin Superior court for John Lin Motta, 19, of San Rafael, when he failed to appear for sentencing for burglary and petty theft.

Motta earlier had pleaded guilty to burgiarizing the Colombo Meat Co. in San Rafael last June and petty theft at the Gemini clothing store in Sausalito last May.

Ralph Nader Wants Country To Live Up To Its Billing

He's Not A Consumer But A Social Critic

By Melvin Maddocks
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

There is a story that Ralph Nader was eating dinner in one of Washington's more splendid restaurants (for once) when he discovered a dead fly in his salad. Anguish and indignation. Both arms shot in the air to summon the waiter, the nation, and perhaps even heaven as his witness.

Was this the reflex response of an offended gourmet? Hardly. Nobody could be less of a consumer, after all, than America's No. 1 consumer advocate. He owns no car, no TV set. A room in a rather run-down Washington brownstone is his notion of home. He wears a standard dark suit. (Several of the same nonpattern hang in his closet.) His socks tend to slump. He scuffs his shoes.

The fly in the salad, one must assume, affronted his good taste far less than it affronted his principles. It may be supposed that Nader's fly was a blight, not on his lettuce but on his concept of the American Dream. In that outrageous fly he saw pesticide abuse, underpaid migrant workers, overscheduled refrigerator truck drivers, unsanitary restaurant kitchens — in short, a flawed America.

Ralph Nader could be the last man to take a fly in his salad as a national disaster. This is his oddity, this is his genius: a simple, old-fashioned expectation that his country must live up to its own billing — that the 350-year-old invention called the New World ought to work.

Where does this fervent intolerance for all native forms of self-serving sloppiness come from? Where will it lead? These are appropriate questions at a moment when Naderism — that peculiar revival of American pragmatism and idealism — seems to be in transition from a process to a quasi-political faith.

In its original form, Naderism appeared as muckraking journalism — the sort of populist writing that 70 years ago led to Lincoln Steffens's documentary of an earlier urban crisis ("The Shame of the Cities") and Upton Sinclair's, expose of the meat-packing industry ("The Jungle"). In the pages of The Christian Science Monitor, back during the early 1960s, Nader, fresh out of Princeton and Harvard Law School, wrote first explorations of what were to become his habitual concerns.

The Nader by-line file contains, for example, a two-part series on the cosmetics industry and a study of the American Indian. As early as 1959, he fired a letter to the editor outlining his case for automobile safety. Other articles detailed Nader warnings on the perils of high heels and the risks of flammable fabrics.

In the midst of this hard-eyed consumerism there rests a curiously lyrical piece — a vision of Lost Eden — describing at firsthand those ancient ecological casualties, the cedars of Lebanon. It is rather as if this son of a Lebanese-American restaurant owner in Winsted, Conn., inherited somehow both the extravagant hopes and the extravagant disappointments of a first-generalion immigrant.

The man himself has defined Naderism as "a revolt against the aristocratic uses of technology." Are these the words of a romantic disguised as a realist?

Subsequent work has tended to conceal motivation behind a coda of case-building techniques that may deserve penetration. Generally Nader is not approached from the point of view of literary analysis. But Naderism, after all, is a school of social criticism, and its style, its intentions may be discerned at lease partially through the text.

The Nader Study Group Reports — now numbering more than a dozen — have become an art form of their own. Subject matter ranges from government regulatory agencies to nursing homes, from General Motors — of course — to water pollution. But a general style, a common attack appears to govern them all.

Nader's "Raiders," the student volunteers who research and group-write these projects, have described their basic instructions. Come on with a few impressive facts at the start of an interview, the master has advised. And when you run into evasion, say to your squirming victim: "A man with your credentials, Mr. So-and-so, certainly should be able to answer a question like that."

A cultural tone may be given a report by the use of quotes at the beginning of chapters. Deuteronomy, Plato, and the poet Thomas Hood are among the sources. "Water Wasteland" ran the gamut from James Whitcomb Riley ("Oh! the old swimmin' hole!") to an American Indian proverb: "The frog does not/Drink up/The pond pon in which/He lives."

Statistics — preferably hair-raising — are used to establish the gravity and scope of the topic at hand:

There are 12,000 potentially toxic chemicals now used by American industries.

The fat content in frankfurters rose from 17 to 33 per cent in 15 years.

(©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society)

Americans spend $5 billion annually on cosmetics — the pseudoscience of looking young — and only $1.5 billion on the substantive problems of the aging.

Early on, the Nader Report reader is likely to feel shocked, ignorant, guilty, or all three at once. If so inclined, he may also feel paranoid, as if a secret power elite were playing him for a complete fool. "Kafkaesque tapestry" is not untypical figure of speech.

For facts, a Nader Report often leans on government research as well as interviews. The investigation into mining, for example, drew heavily from a 240-page study on "Environmental Effects of Underground Mining" compiled by the Department of the Interior — and then buried in its own bureaucratic mine shafts.

The posture of a Nader Report, on the other hand, is all its own, and unambivalent to a fault. Nader and his raiders want action, and they use spitballs to get it. Of the regulatory agencies they have studied, the troops have had this to say:

The Interstate Commerce Commission is a "captive" of the transportation industries.

The Federal Trade Commission is distinguished for "alcoholism, spectacular assitude . . . and incompetence by the most modest standards."

The regulations of the Food and Drug Administration are "a catalog of favors."

Nader and his vigilantes have judged that the automobile industry has been guilty of "massive thievery," the advertising industry, of "massive lying." The industrial-safety bill passed by Congress is "a sham not worthy of consideration" and so is current consumer-protection legislation: "farcical in part and deceptive in the remainder."

At present, Nader is mounting his most ambitious project: a 1,000-member team will investigate Congress itself. Congress, Nader has said, is "a continuous underachiever." But he has also said: "Nothing remotely compares with Congress as the hope of reclaiming America."

Nader's criterion for his stern, almost evangelistic judgments is blunt: "What are these institutions supposed to be doing for the public? Are they doing it?"

It is said by those under his guns that Nader exaggerates for effect. And indeed he once called frankfurters "among the most dangerous missiles this country produces." It is said — of the Nader Report on California, for instance — that he brings up "nothing really new." Inevitably facts and their selection get challenged.

But the moral force behind Nader's acerbic probings is harder to refute. He is convinced that tippy tractors, color TV sets leaking radiation, baby foods seasoned with monosodium glutamate — all inferior products — make inferior men of those who sell them and those who buy them.

He is worried that "a surrender process" to mediocrity is at work. "Will everyone in time adapt to once intolerable levels of pollution and congestion?" he asks. Worse: Will everyone in time adapt to once intolerable ethical levels? "What's important," he has said, "is to get America's ethics turned around."

Nader is a "consumerist" only in a narrow sense. He crystallizes a prevalent mood in the United States: a weariness with "making it," with materialistic success; a yearning to find "something more" to do with your life. What he says about his own profession a lot of other Americans are saying about their own: "Almost all the organized legal representation in our country is working to protect private interests and private wealth."

At the price, perhaps, of a certain rhetorical simplification, he has restored honor to the politician's cliche: public service. So far as everyone from General Motors on down can determine, he has no "angle." He works 16-hour days. His $2,500 lecture fees, the royalties from his books, the $280,000 he received (after lawyer's fees) from his famous suit against General Motors for invasion of privacy — virtually all his income — goes to the Center for Study of Responsive Law and its subsidiaries.

"Nader's accomplishments create respect," a raider has commented, "but I think it's his asceticism that produces the undistilled admiration." To a society jerry-built across credibility gaps, Ralph Nader has become the symbol of a man on the level.

At the same time, his organization threatens to grow into a big business of its own. The branches proliferate: Center for Auto Sfety, Public Interest Research Group, Clearinghouse for Professional Responsibility, Corporate Accountability Research Group. One of the latest: a fund-raising operation called Public Citizen, Inc.

Nader has moved onto college campuses, produced a manual for student action and thrown down this typical Nader challenge: "If all students contribute a mere 3 per cent of what they spend on personal pleasure, you could create the biggest lobbying force in the nation."

Meanwhile, in England and possibly even in France, homegrown Nader's raiders are about to emerge.

In an Esquire essay Gore Vidal nominated Nader for president, and people have seconded that nomination — in print.

Obviously Nader has arrived at that point where success tends to become a catalyst that turns a man into something other than he started out to be.

He has summed up his version of the problem: "This country is on fire." And with devil-exorcising, puritan zeal he has applied himself to stamping out the fire, if not the brimstone.

But now he has become important enough so that he must define for himself, and for others, seomthing more — his ultimate goals. If Americans all strap on their seat belts and their inflatable collision bags, clean up the air and the water, and get rid of cyclamates, phosphates, and hexachlorophene, what next.

The question hangs over his head like an opportunity — like a sword. It is a question Nader has never answered, nor has he showed any special sign of wanting to. But it would be premature to assume he can't.

Never underestimate a perfectionist with a moral passion to shoo all the flies from all the salads in the world.

Milk Price Hikes Called 'Payoffs'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Consumer groups led by Ralph Nader want a U.S. District Court to order a rollback of government milk support prices, contending they were hiked to current levels as a payoff for $322,500 raised for President Nixon's re-election campaign by three groups of dairy farmers.

A suit seeking a rollback in the support prices was filed Monday in Washington. An increase of 27 cents a hundredweight in government price supports for milk was ordered March 25 by then Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin. Only 13 days earlier, Hardin had ruled there would be no increase in support prices, but that decision inspired protests from the dairy industry that were directed to the White House and Congress.

Filing the suit were Nader and his Public Ritizen Inc., the Federation of Homemakers, and the Consumers Association of the District of Columbia. Named defendants were Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz and the Commodity Credit Corporation, which directs the price support program.

Nader and the others charged the boost in support prices had increased retail prices for dairy products by 3 to 4 per cent.

The suit said Nixon was not the only recipient of campaign contributions. It alleged that more than 50 senators and House members of both parties had received more than $150,000 in the last two years.

Among them, it said, were Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, who received $10,625, and Edmund S. Muskie, who received $1,600.

The suit said Hardin changed his mind on a support price increase last spring "based not on the economics for the industry but on promises or expectations of substantial campaign contributions." The decision was "in fact dictated by political considerations," the suit contended.

Most of the funds, according to the suit, came from three big milk cooperatives — Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI), which operates in a 22-state area from Minnesota to Texas; Mid-America Dairies (MAD) of Springfield, Mo.; and Dairymen Inc. (DI) of Louisville, Ky.

The suit said each of the cooperatives, using a political fund-raising committee, started to funnel money into the Republican campaign kitty shortly before and immediately after March 25 last year.

Other Democratic senators who received contributions included William Proxmire of Wisconsin, $9,000; and Harold E. Hughes of Iowa, $5,000, the suit said.

Safety Versus Cost In Autos Questioned

ANAHEIM (UPI)—The president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association said today that stiffer safety and clean air requirements will raise hard questions about the cost versus the benefits.

Both industry and the government, said Franklin M. Kreml, will have to provide acceptable answers to the public.

Addressing the Special Equipment Manufacturers Association, an automotive aftermarket group, Kreml said "It is clearly our duty to constantly analyze the public worth of our own policies and objectives and give close examination to any action affecting the use of our products which we feel is not in the public interest."

Both industry and government action will be required to solve some problems related to motor vehicle use, he said "but solutions must come from realistic appraisal and proven effectiveness and not be borne on a wave of hysteria or illconceived action."

Kreml said motor vehicle manufacturers have made significant advances toward safety and clean air goals at relatively low costs to consumers. "However, as these costs increase due to more stringent requirements, the public will demand to know more about cost-benefit relationships," he said. "Both industry and government must be prepared to provide acceptable answers."

FBI Boss's Daughter A Crimebuster

MIAMI (UPI) — Mary Lou Whittaker, 19-year-old daughter of Miami's FBI chief, has been told all her life that preventing crime is "everybody's business, not just the police's."

Mary Lou took her dad's word Sunday and has the bruises to prove it.

The daughter of Kenneth Whittaker, special agent in charge of the Miami FBI, is a cashier supervisor at a North Miami Beach discount store.

Sunday, she tackled a six-foot shoplifting suspect and grappled with him "an awful long 30 seconds" before the store's security guards came to the rescue.

Miss Whittaker, a sophomore at Barry College, said store security guards had taken the suspect into their offices for questioning when he broke and ran.

"He came running across the store and I heard people yelling to stop him," Mary Lou said. "He leaped over the checkout counter right to where I was standing, so I grabbed him.

"I put my arms around him and held on. He pushed me into the window and it shook a lot, but I held on. Then he knocked the wind out of me, but I held on.

"Nobody seemed to be doing anything and I thought 'Where is everybody.' I thought if I didn't hold on, he would be free, so I kept holding on."

Security guards finally grabbed the suspect, and he was arrested on charges of stealing $28 worth of merchandise.

Whittaker admitted later he never taught Mary Lou or his other children much self-defense but said he was proud of his daughter's action.

Trial Scheduled On Drug Charges

A jury trial was set yesterday in Marin Superior Court for the week of Feb. 14 for Jerry Ray Wade, 21, of San Rafael, who faces heroin and marijuana charges as well as one of credit card forgery.

Wade was arrested last month in a Bermuda Palms motel room, where drug agents said they found $1,000 worth of heroin along with pot.

He is charged with possessing heroin for sale and possessing marijuana, as well as with forging a stolen credit card last October in San Rafael.

Fathers In The Delivery Room: One Hospital's Program Findings

Many hospitals and local health departments do not allow fathers in the delivery room. The premise being that if the husband gets sick, or faints during a crucial period, the physician's attention might be drawn away from the mother. Another objection to husbands in the delivery room is that their presence increases the chance of infection. In addition, the obstetrician cannot function property with someone looking over his shoulder.

In 1968, St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Rapids, Mich., decided to allow fathers in the delivery room. The decision rested upon mutual consent between physician, patient, and husband.

IT WAS recommended (but not required) that the couple attend prenatal classes as preparation for the experience. The father also was told that he could excuse himself any time he wished.

During the first year, 150 couples participated in the trial program. This represented 9 per cent of the total deliveries. Most mothers reported labor and delivery to be easier, or the same as expected. Only one woman said she did not want her husband in the delivery room again.

According to Dr. Charles W. Aldridge, Jr., the program was more enthusiastically received by the patients than the hospital personnel. But there was no doubt that it improved interfamily relationships.

THE PLAN was not successful when the mother needed a general anesthetic, or there was a rapid, disorganized delivery. Husbands also were excluded when there were obstetrical complications, prolonged hard labor, or a difficult forceps delivery was anticipated. Physicians also discouraged parents who had neglected to attend prenatal instruction courses.

Only one father became faint and asked to leave the delivery room. He had not eaten for 14 hours. Another left the room after developing nausea and vomiting. The other husbands had no problems.

LUNG COLLAPSE

E. N. writes: Please explain spontaneous pneumothorax.

REPLY

The space between the lungs and the inner lining of the chest wall is a vacuum. Spontaneous pneumothorax occurs when a small air sac near the outer surface of the lung ruptures and air escapes into this space. The vacuum disappears and the pressure of the air collapses the lung. Absorption of this air takes from six to eight weeks during which the lung re-expands.

BONE MARROW DEPRESSION

W. H. writes: What is meant by depression of the bone marrow?

REPLY

Blood cells are manufactured in the bone marrow and the process is slowed by various chemicals, atomic rays, drugs, and diseases. The result is anemia, or a reduction in the number of white cells.

Big Supply Of Liquor Taken At Yacht Club

Two boats berthed at San Rafael Yacht Harbor and a storeroom at the San Rafael Yacht Club have been burglarized, police reported today.

Biggest loss was at the yacht club 405 Francisco Boulevard, where $545 worth of liquor and $13 in cash were taken sometime Sunday afternoon or yesterday morning, police said.

Personal possessions, valued at $57, were taken between last Thursday and Sunday from a boat owned by Raleigh G. Young of 2300 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael, berthed at the yacht harbor, 557 Francisco Boulevard, officers reported.

A boat owned by George W. Manz of 34 La Loma Court, San Rafael, also docked at the yacht harbor, was entered Sunday night or early yesterday, but apparently nothing was taken, police said.

Innocent Plea To Heroin Sale

Christopher Austin Fenn, 24, of San Rafael, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Superior Court to a charge of heroin sale. A jury trial was set for the week of March 27.

Fenn was arrest Oct. 7 on a warrant charging him with selling $60 worth of the narcotic to an undercover agent on Aug. 3.

Reason For Shootings: 'The System'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—An unemployed janitor said he stopped his car and shot two policemen with a rifle Monday because of a sudden impulse to strike against "the system."

Asked by newsmen why he had done it, Junious L. Poole, 21, replied:

"Aw, man. It was a fool's play. Just a fool's play."

Poole was arrested several blocks from where he stopped his car and "without saying a word," wounded two officers, one critically.

"They hadn't done anything. It was the whole system," Poole told newsmen from his jail cell. "I don't know why I decided to let them have it. It just jumpted out."

Police said Poole had received a number of traffic tickets recently, the last one hour before the shooting. They speculated he was after the officer who issued him the citation and when he couldn't find him, attacked the first policemen he saw.

Patrolman James C. Bailey Jr., 30, underwent emergency surgery and several transfusions from being shot in the abdomen. Officer Code W. Beverly was shot in the thigh.

Bailey said from his hospital bed that he and Beverly had begun walking their beat in the Mission District when a white car pulled up.

"A Negro got out with a rifle in his hands and, without saying a word, started shooting at us," Bailey said.

"Code got hit right away and went down. He did not have a chance to return the fire. I got hit, but I was able to squeeze off eight shots. I don't think I hit him, though."

The shooting was the latest in a series of unprovoked attacks on policemen in the San Francisco Bay area in the past two years. Six officers have been killed.

Police said the gunman drove away at high speed after commandeering a car occupied by a woman motorist. He struck two parked cars seven blocks away and fled into an apartment complex.

TELEVISION IN REVIEW

'Sanford And Son' Proving A Winner

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—NBC-TV's new midseason situation comedy series, "Sanford and Son," about an aging black Los Angeles junk dealer, appears to be an instant, impressive hit, according to the national ratings issued Monday.

The series, already critically acclaimed for its hilarious and touching portrayal of the relationship between the elderly junk dealer and his ambitious 32-year-old bachelor son, finished fifth among all network programs.

Indications that NBC-TV had a potential major success in "Sanford and Son" came when it got whopping overnight ratings in New York and Los Angeles for its premiere, and then came in sixth in the 70-city ranking.

What the national ratings seem to indicate rather clearly is that "Sanford and Son" is not merely popular in such big cities as New York and Los Angeles and the top 70 markets, but with the nation at large.

At least, that is the message from the statistics announced Monday, which cover the week ending Jan. 16 and include the "Sanford and Son" premiere episode. Last Friday night's second episode, by the way, made a strong showing again in the New York and Los Angeles overnight ratings, though not quite up to the first one.

While "Sanford and Son" came in fifth in the rankings issued Monday, CBS-TV's "All in the Family" finished no. 1 again, and this double success is quite a tribute to the production company of Bud Yorkin and Norman Lear, which turns out both series.

The difference is that while "Sanford and Son" seems to have caught on immediately with a large audience, "All in the Family"—which also began as a midseason replacement last year—was a slow starter in the ratings. It had mediocre statistics in its first 13 programs, and then, curiously, caught on big in its reruns, with a big push from critics.

While audiences have naturally taken to such stars as Carroll O'Connor in "All in the Family" and Redd Foxx in "Sanford and Son," the YorkinLear production company is the chief hero of the success because of its persistence in getting the shows on, and doing them its own way.

The result is a breath of fresh air in video comedy, a funny exposure to some aspects of contemporary life heretofore considered taboo or unsaleable at the ultra-cautious networks. Who would have thought that a bigot and a black junk dealer would be the central characters of two of the nation's most popular shows?

The national ratings also reported on some other new midseason series. CBS-TV's situation comedy with Don Rickles as an advertising man with a family did fairly well, coming in 34th, despite a dreadful time slot late Friday night. Another new CBS-TV situation comedy, "Me and the Chimp," a stupid little entry, went nowhere, ranking 56th. And an ABC-TV melodrama about a psychic investigator, "The Sixth Sense," failed badly in the statistics—finishing 64th.

CBS-TV's "Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour," a relatively new entry, dropped sharply to 35th place after a strong start. James Garner's comic western, "Nichols," was humiliated by coming 69th among 70 shows.

GOV. GEORGE WALLACE
Dad will vote for him
(Christian Science Monitor photo)

WALLACE SUPPORTER

A Bit Of Alabama Blooms In Quincy

By JACK WAUGH
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

QUINCY, Plumas County — "But, Dad . . ."

"You bet, son, I'll vote for George Wallace if he runs again. I voted for him last time, in '68, and so did you Uncle Charley, and there are a lot more people who are going to do it this time than did it last time. You wait and see."

My father has often been that way, voting for a third-party candidate or for somebody else besides whom most of the rest of us were voting for. He is, by his own definition, a tri-unity of "radical, loner, and reactionist." And he is doing it again.

Now that Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is entered in the Florida primary and threatening to roll as a third wheel again if the Democrats don't nominate somebody to his liking — and few such exist — his name has started bobbing up on the stump. And the first voice I heard shouting was Dad's. If he had a red, white and blue hat, it would have George written on it.

The first time my father ever voted, in 1920, he puzzled over the presidential ballot of that year, saw Harding for the Republicans and Cox for the Democrats and hadn't heard of either one of them. The last name of the ballot was Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate, who was in prison. "There he was in prison and still running for president," Dad said, "so I voted for that man right away, quick."

All of us in the family have heard what happened next at the dinner table on the farm the night after. Grandma had been up all election night down at the precinct counting election votes. There were 800 votes cast in the town that year. And only one of them was for Debs.

"You know," Grandma said, her brow knitting in 15 different directions of concern, "there's a Socialist in our community. Voted for Debs. And we can't figure out for the life of us who it is."

Then she looked at Dad, who was grinning and winking at Grandpa, and she gasped, went slack mouthed, and said, "Oh, Arthur! You . . . I'll never tell a soul!"

In 1958 my father surveyed the GOP ballot in the presidential primary, turned fiery-eyed at both names and wrote in: "any other idiot. X."

Dad has a rule about marking ballots: just vote "no" to the whole thing, because, "They word it in such a way that you can't understand any of it."

He's a man straight out of the ruggedness of American political individualism. When you call out for all the WASPS in the room to stand, he rises gladly. He is as hard as a diamond, strong as lye water, and as forthright and honest as a bucket of water in the face on a cold Sierra Nevada spring morning.

He and his brother Charley together were so strong in their younger days, they could hoist an entire wagon load of alfalfa with a single sling of their three-tined pitchforks. At 73, his handshake still bunches up the bones in the unsuspecting fingers of a new and wincing acquaintance. He wears a green-gray-blue plaid lumberman's shirt and has worked hard all of his life, most of it here at the roof of the country, and voted a brand of politics as maverick as he is.

He reasons about politics with a smog-free clarity of conviction. And this year he is as certain as ever he doesn't care for blacks or for hippies with long hair and the American flag sewed on the seat of their pants, or for "dropouts on welfare."

He says: "Son, here I have paid hard earned taxes for years and I see these people throw rocks through the windows at the university and burn down our institutions of higher learning and we have to build them up again. It makes me furious."

The thought of school busing upsets him as much as it upsets the most avidly anti-busing parent in Dallas. "That issue could decide this election, mark my words. There isn't any parent in his right mind who likes that idea."

So h. will vote for Governor Wallace again because, "while I don't think he is the best man in the world, he is dedicated enough to straighten out this racial stiuation."

"Son," he says, 'the government should use any menas necessary to stop this disrespect for law and order. I read the other day where some 90 policemen were killed last year in the line of duty. How are you going to keep law and order, when keeping it is so dangerous. Pretty soon you won't be able to hire anybody to keep it. Then we will really be in a bad way."

"You know," he says, "maybe it wouldn't be a bad idea to resurrect old Eugene Debs."

Dad, given his X, would probably be just ornery enough to vote for him again.

Soccer 'Big Game' Bound For Marin

By RALPH CHATOIAN

The 1972 Cal-Stanford big game in Marin County. No, not United States football, but European football, known in these parts as soccer.

Officials of the Marin Youth Soccer Association are putting together final arrangements for a soccer game between Cal and Stanford Sunday, March 12, on the College of Marin field. They're hoping to hold the cost down to $1 for adults, proceeds going to the Marin Youth Soccer group.

"This will be the first soccer game between two big time colleges in Marin," boasted soccer spokesman Bob Braghetta. It should be quite a show for soccer buffs.

THE OTHER DAY I received a note from Barry Allen of Corte Madera suggesting we get more news on bicycle riding in the I-J. "I would really appreciate any such news you could come up with," said Allen.

Well, after going through all the major wire services I drew a blank, but then came a news release from the Northern California Cycling Association that it was making a strong bid to bring the Olympic Bicycling Trials to the Northern California area.

Bob Tetzlaff of Los Gatos took his case to the Olympic Committee of the Amateur Bicycling League of American, meeting in Los Angeles last Saturday, and won. A site was picked for the track trials — San Jose — but dates have not yet been set, said association publicist David Smiley of Mill Valley.

NOW THAT Menlo College has gone coeducational, the athletic teams get some femininity in their cheer leaders. One of the gals on the first official Oak cheer leaders cast is Sally English, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. English of Kentfield. The gals have had a lot to cheer about since Menlo's basketball team has won 14 of its 16 games and leads the Coast Conference.

WHEN THE BOARD of directors of the National Ski Patrol holds its meeting to discuss patrol reorganization at Incline Village, Nev. Friday, in attendance will be Richard E. Thoning of San Rafael. He's not a board member, but serves as an insurance advisor. The Ski Patrol is an all volunteer patrol system that comes to the aid of downed skiers and now numbers 26,500 members throughout United States, Europe and the Far East. And as we all know, skiing is one sport that can keep an insurance man busy.

NATIONAL FOOTBALL League Players Association called its board meeting for Thursday through Sunday in Key Biscayne, Fla. (why don't they ever hold meetings in Garden City, Kansas?) and announced: "This is the first time in the association's history that we have invited members of the media to cover the meetings. The meetings themselves will be closed but press releases will be given out daily with a final press conference at the conclusion of the meeting." This is called "covering" the meetings?

FOOTBALL NEVER DIES, it doesn't even fade away. As soon as the Pro Bowl officially pulled the curtain on the 1971-72 season, announcements started coming from teams in the NFL announcing exhibition games for the 1972 season. That's right, only six more months and pro football season will be here.

Olympic Swimmer Retires

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Debbie Meyer, who reached a peak in her young swimming career in 1968 when she won three Olympic gold medals, can't force herself to make another try in the 1972 games.

The 19-year-old Miss Meyer announced her retirement from competition Monday because "I couldn't get myself back up again."

ONLY SWIMMER

The only swimmer in history to win three individual gold medals in a single Olympics, she had been a leading candidate for a berth on the U.S. team for the summer competition in Munich, Germany.

"It's getting to be a chore," she said, "and that's what I don't want."

Last September, Miss Meyer abandoned talk of retirement and said she would become "a robot again" for the 1972 Olympics.

GOOD WORKOUTS

"I told myself I'm going to get in there and do it," she said Monday. "I had a couple of really good workouts two weeks before Christmas."

She said she usually has a few bad days after a layoff, but after the holidays "I had three weeks of bad days."

Her retirement ended a short but sparkling career. At the age of 16, she became the youngest person ever to win the Sullivan Award, given annually to America's outstanding amateur athlete.

HONOR

In the 1968 Mexico City games, she won gold medals in the 200, 400 and 800 meter freestyle events and was named woman athlete of the year by Russia's Pravda newspaper. She has broken world freestyle swimming records 19 times.

"Swimming has been a tremendous and exciting experience for me," she said in announcing her retirement. "If i had it to do again, I'd do it all over."

EXPERIENCE

She said the most valuable experience was the opportunity to compete under her coach, Sherm Chavoor of the Arden Hills Swim Club.

A sophomore at American River College, Miss Meyer said she plans to spend much of her spare time skiing.

NOT-SO-SUDDEN DEATH

Barber Captures Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—Miller Barber and George Archer differed in their opinions on the types of playoff used when golf matches are tied at the end of regulation play so they played both kinds and Barber beat Archer at the one Archer said he preferred.

It started off as a common 18-hole playoff after Barber and Archer tied at the end of 72 holes in the Dean Martin Tucson Open, but it ended up as a history making event as Barber rolled in a 20-foot birdie putt on the 21st hole of the playoff.

Midway through the first nine holes of the playoff it looked as though Barber might run off with it as Archer, usually a deadly putter, seemed to lose the touch.

At the end of 10 holes Barber was three strokes ahead. Archer could only gain one stroke back when Barber double bogeyed the par three 12th hole.

However on the 16th and 17th holes, Archer hit two birdies and all of a sudden it was all even going to the 18th hole. Both golfers parred the 18th and for the first time ever had to go back to the 15th hole for a sudden death playoff after an 18-hole playoff.

Both Barber and Archer parred the first two holes of sudden death and then Barber sank his birdie putt on the 17th to win the $30,000 first prize. Archer took home $17,100 for his second place finish. Added to that was $5,000 each from the network which televised the playoff.

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Golden State Warriors' 11-game National Basketball Association victory string was snapped last night.

The host Chicago Bulls were the culprits as Chet Walker scored 29 pocnts to lead the 110-105 triumph in the lone NBA action last night.

The Warriors jumped off to a 14-6 lead and managed to hold onto a 28-25 first quarter lead before the Bulls took charge.

Jerry Sloan, who had his free throw string broken at 20 straight, connected on 22 points, while Bob Weiss added 19 and Norm Van Lier netted 14.

East, West To Meet In Hockey

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Tradition will set the pattern for hockey's 25th all-star game tonight, but once the puck is dropped rival coaches Billy Reay of the West and Al MacNeil of the East will try to get maximum fire power on the ice.

Both Reay and MacNeil, who will be the second exila from the National Hockey League to coach an all-star team in two straight years, said they would adhere to tradition and start the players voted onto the first all-star team of the east and west divisions at midseason.

That meant that MacNeil, who was relegated to the Nova Scotia Voyagers this season after directing the Montreal Canadiens to the Stanley Cup last year, would start his playoff hero, Ken Dryden, in the goal, Brad Park of New York and Bobby Orr of Boston at defense, Phil Esposito of Boston at center and two wings from the New York Rangers, Vic Hadfield and Rod Gilbert.

Reay will put five of his Chicago Black Hawks in the starting lineup, goalie Tony Esposito, defensemen Pat Stapleton and Bill White, center Stan Mikita and left wing Bobby Hull.

But once the game gets underway, MacNeil indicated he would try to replace Esposito with Jean Ratelle, the Ranger center, to play with Hadfield and Gilbert, to give the East team a consistent scoring threat with a combination used to playing with each other. Ratelle, who led the league in midseason scoring, Gilbert and Hadfield, rank 2-3-4 in NHL scoring behind Esposito now.

To counter this move, Reay played to get two more of his Hawks, center Pit Martin and Chico Maki, onto the ice with Hull, and expected to work Mikita on a line with his Hawk teammate, Dennis Hull, and Goldsworthy.

Dryden had been a doubtful starter due to a back injury but he has been playing recently and MacNeil said he knew no reason why Dryden couldn't open the game and yield at the midway point to New York's second team all-star, Gilles Villemure.

IN JAPAN

Brundage Vows To Ban Pros

TOKYO (UPI)—Avery Brundage, chairman of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), vowed today to keep professional Athletes from competing in the Olympic Games, including the XI Winter Olympics which open in Saporro next week.

"We will admit those interested in sports for sports sake and exclude those interested in sports for financial reasons," Brudage told the Japanese National Press Club. "It's as simple as that."

Brundage said the eligibility of individual Alpine skiers competing at the Olympics in Sapporo must be settled by the IOC Eligibility Committee, which is meeting here Jan. 2627, and the results of those meetings won't be known until Jan. 31 when the IOC meets in Sapporo.

Asked specifically about Austrian skier Karl Schranz, who readily admits making money on the European ski circuit, Brundage said:

"As for disqualifying athletes, that's done by committees created for that purpose. I don't disqualify people."

Brundage added, however, "the eligibility committee is well acquainted with my views."

The issue of eligibility threatens to blow up at the winter games. There have been various reports of lists being compiled of skiers who have violated the Olympic code by allowing themselves to be photographed with equipment labeled by brand names, and receiving money for promoting the equipment.

The Japanese organizers of the Olympics are fearful that if the world's top Alpine skiiers are disqualified, the status of the games will be reduced.

"This is a highly aggravated situation," Brundage said. "There have been scandals in skiing for many years. The Olympic movement and tha XI Winter Games will be harmed if they (the games) are not kept honest.

"If certain individuals are disqualified, that's too bad," he added. "We've heard cries of those whose toes have been stepped on, but that's too bad. The rules are there and they must be enforced."

MISS WALSH ON WAY BACK

Sharon Walsh of San Rafael will return home Monday following her month-long tennis tour of England and South Africa.

She lost to Winnie Shaw of Scotland in the first round of the Rothman's Indoor Invitational in London Friday.

Previously, she had competed in five South African tournaments, reaching the semifinals once and quarterfinals twice, and winning a doubles title with Jurgen Fassbender of West Germany in Port Elizabeth.

San Jose 'Put It Together'

OAKLAND (UPI) —San Jose State, which only won five basketball games in two years, has won that many already this season—including an upset win over California last Saturday.

Spartan coach Ivan Guevara had the flu and did not attend Monday's meeting of the Northern California basketball writers but sent along word that "we put it all together. Rebounding and free throw shooting have lost us some close games but against California, we were greatly improved in both."

Spartan forward Dave Dockery, who hit 23 against the Bears, won Player of the Week honors.

Cal coach Jim Padgett added "we had no excuses. We didn't play too well, but all due credit to San Jose."

Padgett also was asked bluntly to comment on reports that the shakeup of the University of California might involve his ouster.

"My name was still on the door when I left," he said.

Santa Clara's Carroll Williams, whose Broncos were manhandled by UCLA, said, "you always learn something when you play UCLA. Bill Walton (Bruin center) does everything —rebounding, scoring, passing —and he also does a helluva job of officiating."

AUTO RACE

Waldegaard Grabs Monte Carlo Lead

MONTE CARLO (UPI)— Sweden's Bjorn Waldegaard snatched the early lead in the Monte Carlo Motor Rally today with the powerful Porsches installing themselves in the first two places.

Waldegaard and co-driver Hans Thorszelius sped over the opening speed section of the rally's second stage in 17 minutes 21 seconds in their 2.4 liter Porsche 911S.

French teammates Gerard Larrousse and Jean-Claude Perramond clocked 17:30 in an identical car.

The dry conditions gave the West German cars the edge as more than 200 cars began the 900-mile stage with its 165 miles of seed tests divided into eight sections.

Italians Sandro Munari and Mario Manucci proved their Lancia Fulvia much faster than expected by taking third place in 17:56.

The French Alpine Renault team got off to a bad start with Frenchman Jean-Luc Therier managing only seventh fastest time in 18:21 over the Alpine test at Saint Auban.

The two Team Ford escorts also showed their power with Timo Makinen taking the fourth spot with British co-driver Henry Liddon in 18:03.

Frenchman Francois Piot and Briton Jim Porter clocked 18:05 in the second Ford for fifth fastest, although a one-minute penalty picked up on the first road stage Saturday will eventually pull them lower in the overall standings.

The Italian pair of Amilcare Ballestreri and Amilcare Bernachini retired their Lancia Team car after clocking a slow 19:23 in the first test.

Sixth fastest was Finn Rauno Aaltonen in the Japanese Team Datsun in 18:09. Briton Tony Fall in the second Datsun was timed in 18:26 for eighth place followed by Swedes Harry Kallstrom, Lancia, 18:29 and Ove Andersson, Alpine Renault, 18:32.

AT CLUBHOUSE

Gun Club Banquet Saturday

The Marin Rod and Gun Club will hold a 46th anniversary stag banquet Saturday night, 7 p.m., at the clubhouse at Point San Quentin, according to A. M. Dewey, president.

"Our organization," Dewey explains, "will be celebrating its founding in 1926. It was then and is now a conservation and fish and game-oriented enterprise. We seek to promote conservation throughout the state."

Tickets for members and guests cost $7 per and are available from the organization.

Dewey adds that Bob Fagg of San Rafael, a Marin Rod and Gun Club board member, will serve as master of ceremonies for the event which features five vaudeville acts.

Staubach Takes Maxwell Trophy

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—All the superlatives were used up by the time Roger Staubach stepped to the podium Monday night to accept the Maxwell Club award as the outstanding pro football player of 1971.

Squads of speakers used words like "great," "magnificent," and "dedicated" to describe the Dallas quarterback. Each mention of his name brought waves of applause from the 1,000 club members packed in the Sheraton Hotel ballroom.

Roger Staubach, the man who guided the Dallas Cowboys to their first world championship, accepted it all with modesty and a smile.

"It's an unbelieveable feeling to be part of a world champion team," Staubach said. "We haven't even talked about the money. It's just great to be part of the world champs—the first team in football."

"But," he added, "I realize every second that an athlete can't be complacent."

Staubach ended by praising his coach Tom Landry as "the finest coach in football. He's had a tremendous influence on me."

Landry praised Staubach as "the man who exemplifies all that is good in athletics.

"A player puts an extra ingredient in a team," Landry said. "Maybe he provided that extra ingredient."

FISH AND GAME

A Slow Week Of Fishing

By AL GIDDINGS

Another slow weekend. This past week my son, Andy, along with Kay Schneider of Woodacre and Carlo Nerviani of Fairfax, must have put in close to 100 hours steelhead fishing at White House Pool and Tomales Bay steelhead areas. Carlo caught one steelhead, a fresh run male that weighed about five pounds.

I keep trying to keep Andy pepped up on this fishing, but four mornings (and I mean early — 6:30 a.m.) in a row without a strike! It's not like the good old days. I checked only three anglers at Walker Creek but no dice there either. One of the anglers said he hasn't caught a fish there in the last five years. Of course, maybe it's just that we need some rain. Weather conditions can rapidly change the wildlife picture.

FOR INSTANCE, without the usual rains this year, the pond ducks don't have the ponds to paddle and feed in, so they are staying in the bays. If you want to see some full plumaged sprig, go to Tomales Bay, south of Inverness, or to Bolinas Lagoon. The birds are everywhere. If you want some excellent pictures take your camera to Bolinas. The birds are within 50 yards of the road.

If you have never seen a honker, take a ride to Stafford Dam at Novato or Nicasio Dam. Sunday at Nicasio at the north end of the lake, about 90 of these birds were sitting and feeding along the lake shoreline, clear of the water. Don't take a gun. The season's closed, for one thing, and both areas are closed to all hunting also. Take your camera and binoculars. If you see a poacher take his picture and give us a call.

AT A RECENT hunter-safety meeting held for instructors, the problems of hard-of-hearing people who want instruction came up. If you have a hearing problem be sure to explain the problem to the instructor. They may set up a special class if the need is there.

Starting today, there are some excellent clam tides through this week. Today, the low was at 2:03 p.m. with a -.05 tide. The tides will be low through next Sunday, all in the afternoon, and all 0.05 or lower. Get your clam shovels or hoes out and head for Tomales Bay or Limantour Bay. The season is right for clams at this time - no red tide. You do need a 1972 license, and the limits are 10 Washington clams, 10 graper clams or 50 cockle clams which must measure 1½ inches in greatest diameter. Limantour Bay is still open. The new closure by the Fish and Game Commission goes into effect March 1. It's legal to have a limit of Washingtons and a limit of cockles, also, but oh, your back!

DON'T GET fouled up out on the abalone beds. The season is closed and will reopen March 16. Bolinas Lagoon is still under a Health Department quarantine, so it also is closed.

The rians may have been enough to trigger the sturgeon to feed in the bay. This week, with those morning high tides with the full run outs should be ideal. It's getting about due for the stripers to perk up though a warm up in the water temperatures would help. But to get a fish, you've got to give it a go. This could be a hot week!

Davis Cup Admission Blasted

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

UNITED NATIONS — The chairman of the Apartheid Committee of the General Assembly yesterday termed "particularly unfortunate" a decision of the Davis Cup International Tennis Committee to permit South Africa to participate.

Abdul-Rahim Abby Farah of Somalia, the chairman, said his committee was bound to express "strong disapproval" of the decision in light of resolutions passed by the United Nations General Assembly in recent years calling on all states and international organizations to prevent South Africa's participation in international, sports because of its policy of racial segregation (Apartheid).

NEW YORK — Rosemary Casals' victory in the Long Beach Open Sunday night moved the San Francisco native into a tie with Mrs. Billie Jean King for the top spot among the money winners on the Virginia Slims women's tennis circuit.

Miss Casals ucored a 6-2, 6-7, 6-3 triumph over Francoise Durr of France Sunday night in the singles final and then teamed with England's Virginia Wade to win the doubles crown and earn $3,400. The double victory raised Miss Casal's 1972 earnings to $4,600.

ANAHEIM — Andy Messersmith, a 20-game winner for the California Angels last season, said yesterday he has not demanded to be traded but it wouldn't surprise him if he was.

Speier To Try Switch-Hitting

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The San Francisco Giants could well have three switch hitters in their starting lineup this year.

Shortstop Chris Speier indicated Monday he plans to try to hit from both sides of the dish this year.

Kenny Henderson and Tito Fuentes also bat either way, but coach Joey Amalfitano, a backer of the move also cited the case of Chicago infielder Don Kessinger.

BASKETBALL

Marquette Trims Notre Dame, 71-62

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Marquette's Al McGuire still seems to have trouble communicating.

McGuire, whose team is unbeaten this season, openly berated his players last weekend for what he called "a selfish attitude." McGuire said his players were not playing as a team and had lost "the family relationship," which had marked the club.

His words failed to shake the Warriors, who managed to stretch their unbeaten string to 15 games Monday night by beating Notre Dame 71-62 but who again failed to play cohesively.

No other ranked major colleges were in action Monday night but Eau Claire, the No. 1 ranked small college team, saw its unbeaten season ended by North Dakota. A pair of free throws by Craig Skerperud gave North Dakota a 73-70 victory and ended the Blugolds winning streak at 13 games.

Elsewhere, Ken Charles scored 20 points and Bart Woytowich added 19 as Fordham beat Army 81-71 and ended the Cadets' four-game winning streak and Rick Rawlings scored 23 points as Washington State beat Oregon 73-56. Steve Davidson's 21 points and 15 rebounds helped West Texas State rout Long Island University 84-69 and Eastern Kentucky, with Charlie Mitchell hitting 26 points, whipped Western Kentucky 96-78.

Bud Stallworth's 24 points led Kansas to a 74-71 victory over Iowa State and Arizona State, behind Paul Stovall's 25 points, trimmed Los Angeles State 96-89. Bill Newton hit 23 points as Louisiana State beat Florida 84-73 and Bill Duwe, with 25 points, helped California beat Santa Clara 89-79. Steve Hawes' 22 points lifted Washington to an 86-73 victory over Oregon State and Kentucky, with Jim Andrews contributing 34 points, crushed Vanderbilt 106-80.

Andy Klapak's Plans 'Boomerang'

Veteran Fosters Hobby

By RON LENT

In an age of cybernetics and social complexities, Marin County residents may take heart when viewing the exploits of San Anselmo's Andy Klapak.

The 73-year-old retired Air Force lieutenant colonel has fostered his athletic skills and zest for life, which enable him to boast:

"I'm the only amateur boomerang maker in California."

The veteran of two world wars says, "I really got into this thing back in 1920 when I was touring Australia. The natives there were always playing with boomerangs, and they found out I was an athlete. So they taught me how."

Klapak toyed with boomerangs for some 10 years before cultivating his hobby in earnest. "Between 1920 and 1930, I pretty much left my boomeranging activity aside. I was a baseball player."

Indeed

He was offered a $250 a month salary by the Pacific Coast League, "but I turned it down, because I was making more than that in the Army."

Although he never signed a contract, the right-handed pitcher claimed: "I struck out Tony Lazzeri (the ex-New York Yankee second base sensation) many times. I also played against Carl Mays (another former Yankee star) and Paul Waner (a Pittsburgh Pirate batting hero of yesteryear).

"It was an impressive lot, but I had a good fastball and curve. I did fine."

Thus, Klapak was in no hurry to retire and bask in leisure. When he quit playing baseball he started taking his boomerang hobby seriously.

"I set up my first shop in 1930 in my own house. I never sold any of them, because I never had any great need for money by that time," he said.

The building process has withstood the changing years. He states, "I still draw two models on a piece of plywood. I then cut them out and glue them together. I then use a knife and sander to smooth them and mold them into the shape of an airplane wing. It takes about two hours to do this.

"But one thing about all this; you can't throw them away, because they keep coming back."

Klapak then gripped the L-shaped object by an end and demonstrated the throwing motion — "straight over the top," like a Walter Johnson fastball. While civic authorities prohibit the lean, lanky gentleman from tossing his pride and toy in public, Klapak is free to demonstrate his ability within the confines of his shop at his San Anselmo home.

Fortunately, the boomerang never left his clutching fingers, for this solid, wooden object can kill. "I've hunted for quail with this. My boomerang can lop off a quail's head."

An avid hunter for most of his life, Klapak has gone for game "throughout the world except South America and South Dakota. In fact, I was going to go to South Dakota, but I never got around to it."

When not hunting or boomeranging, Klapak can be found playing golf, fixing his car or working with his photos.

"I still shoot in the low 80's," he smiles when discussing his golf skills. Whether hammering out of a bunker or on a dented fender, Klapak is skillful.

"I do most of the repair work on my '65 Thunderbird."

Klapak's versatility also extends to photography.

Be it links, tools, photography or boomerangs, it is no wonder that Andy Klapak has been kissed by a god of success, and, despite the advancing years, he has no intentions of slowing down.

Mays Views Season With Enthusiasm

Willie Mays is looking forward to his 21st baseball season with the enthusiasm of a rookie. "I still love baseball as much as I did when I came up in 1951," said the superstar who will be 41 May 6.

Mays is unmindful of his age until someone mentions it. "I don't feel 40," he said, "but I can't dispute it because that's what the record says."

And while he knows that one day in the not too distant future his retirement will be inevitable, Mays still talks about "three or four more seasons" just as he did several years ago.

"If I had listened to some people I'd have been out of baseball three or four years ago," he said. "I'll continue to play as long as I feel I'm not embarrassing myself or the Giants."

MAYS, AT 40, didn't embarrass himself or the Giants last season. During the first two months of the season, Mays seemed like he was going to prove that time couldn't catch up with him. In the first 10 games of 1971 he hit five homers, one a grand slam, scored nine runs and drove in 15.

By Memorial Day when the Giants opened a 10½ game lead and were threatening a runaway of the National League West flag, Mays' game-winning hits totalled seven and his batting average soared to .340.

IN THAT two-month stretch of the 1971 campaign, Mays pushed himself almost to the point of complete exhaustion, playing doubleheaders and day games after night games.

"The team needed me," he said.

The Giants did, indeed, need their captain in an emergency first base duty because Willie McCovey was out of action with a damaged knee, since repaired in a winter operation.

MAYS NEVER did get complete rest following the initial months of the 1971 campaign. He was a very tired superstar when the season ended. Yet, he finished the campaign with a most respectable .271 batting average and a total of 11 game-winning hits.

Mays naturally is proud of individual records but he takes particular pride in his being listed among the all-time leaders in all categories — runs scored, runs batted in, hits, home runs, extra base hits and total bases.

"That's playing the game," he said," scoring runs, driving in runs."

LAST SEASON he led the National League in a category that was a personal first for him. He had the most walks, 112. Never previously had he drawn as many as 100 walks in a season.

"That's playing the game, too," said Mays.

NATIONAL LEAGUE pitchers still have the utmost respect for Mays. They should. After al, his career total of homers now is 646, seven more than Hank Aaron but still 68 shy of Babe Ruth's all-time mark of 714.

Time now is on Aaron's side in his friendly rivalry with Mays to break Ruth's record. Aaron is three years younger than Mays. He'll be 38 next week.

Wage War In Hockey On Horizon

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — National Hockey League owners face a request from the players association for a 150 per cent increase in playoff pay today while they also consider divisional alignments for the now 16-team league.

Representatives of Long Island and Atlanta franchises each paid $350,000 to the league Monday and were officially welcomed as members, bringing the league up to 16 teams. The prospect of two eight-team divisions or four four-team divisions will be discussed today. But playoff play was top on the agenda.

EAGLESON

Alan Eagleson who represents the NHL Players association as well as about 75 players said players believe the Stanley Cup winners should get $25,000 a man for their work in advancing through the playoffs, winning the divisional title and playing in the Stanley Cup series. A team performing that feat would currently earn $10,000 a man.

The players association has discovered "the NHL is making a hell of a lot more than we guessed," Eagleson said, "and our benefits have not gone up compared to theirs."

The players consider increases in playoff pay the major point to be brought up with the owners today, Eagleson said, but the subject of pensions will also be broached.

PENSIONS

Hockey player pensions currently average between $2,500 and $3,000 a year, Eagleson said, compared to $7,200 for the average baseball pension and $6,000 for pro football.

Eagleson said the major topic of discussion during the player meeting was the proposed World Hockey Association which he said he thought was "the best thing that has happened for the players. I have seen that several general managers in the NHL now are treating their players less and less like sheep and more and more like humans."

PREP OF WEEK

Stone Makes Comeback

By LEW CODDINGTON

In November, Tim Stone didn't want to play basketball. In January, the rest of the Marin County Athletic League wishes he'd stuck to his decision.

Stone, a 6-foot-4 senior from Marin Catholic High School, scored 38 points and grabbed 30 rebounds in two games last week to earn Independent-Journal Prep of the Week honors despite the fact that his team lost both times.

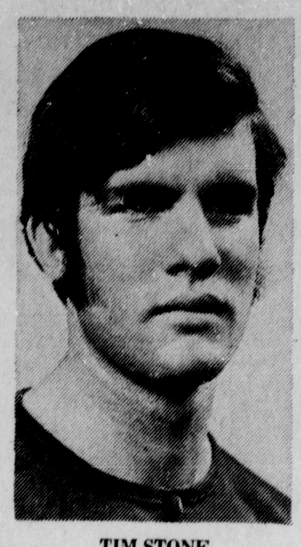
He scored 20 points and grabbed 11 rebounds against Drake last Tuesday, then scored 18 and pulled down 19 boards against Terra Linda. He ranks sixth in MCAL scoring with a 15.8 average.

Stone was a starter his sophomore and junior years at center or forward, but was conspicuously absent when the Wildcats began their non-league season.

"I wanted to visit my folks in Los Angeles," he said. "Besides, I really didn't want to play that much. Basketball was getting to be a drag."

"I have a contract with the team," said coach Dave Gonsalves. "One of the things we agreed to was that the players would pass up vacations, trips, and things like that, in order to practice and play."

So, to go to Los Angeles meant Stone would have to violate the contract and, in effect, quit the team. "After a while, I began to miss basketball," he said. "Just playing in back yards wasn't enough."



TIM STONE
Versatile star

So Stone went before the team and asked to be reinstated. The other players voted to allow him back, so he returned in time for a tournament game in Santa Rosa Dec. 16, and promptly went 0-for-9 from the floor.

"I thought he played a strong game that night," said Gonsalves, "and he played an even stronger game a little while later in which he scored only eight. He's always been a good shooter, but what pleases me most is that he's doing the other things now. He's getting rebounds, handling the ball, playing defense."

Stone has been handling the ball so well, in fact, that he's getting some playing time at guard, a move born partly of inspiration and partly of desperation, since Jim Sullivan has missed two consecutive games with the flu.

"Tim has played every position on the team," said Gonsalves. "Against Redwood (tonight), he'll jump center and then move out to the point."

The versatility Stone shows on the court is not unusual — he is pretty diversified off it, as well. For example, he is an actor. Of sorts.

"I play the part of a waiter in the senior play, 'Hello Dolly,'" he said. "It's a dancing part, and it's supposed to be humorous." Stone weighs 210 pounds and will be joined in the scene by Steve Vanni, who plays center for the Wildcat cagers and is even more burly.

Stone also has a part-time job, working in the kitchen of a Greenbrae steakhouse. Contrary to rumor, the play director did not send scouts to the steakhouse to see if Stone would make a good waiter.

In addition, Stone coaches a fifth-grade basketball team. In his spare time, which is not often, he enjoys going camping ("I like Tahoe best") or listening to music ("mainly rock or folk").

He has managed to find enough time here and there to play baseball one year, run for student body president, and work with the St. Anselm's Teen Club. "Do you ever sleep?" someone asked. "No," he replied, smiling.

Last year he dropped baseball, and isn't planning to go out for it this year, either.

His interest in camping is deep. "I really haven't thought about my career," he said, "but I think I might like to be a forest ranger. I'll probably major in business in college."

Stone hasn't selected a college yet, but leans toward Sacramento State. "They told me they have a space reserved if I keep my grades up," he said.

Stone discounted the recent National Collegiate Athletic Association decision to allow freshmen to play varsity sports, including basketball.

"I don't know if I'd be ready to play varsity," he said. "It's better to start at a lower level and work up." He feels confident about his shooting, but calls himself "weak defensively," although he feels he's improved under Gonsalves' coaching.

Gonsalves agrees, rather happily, that Stone is an improved all-round ballplayer. Marin Catholic's foes agrees as well, but they aren't nearly as happy about it.

Price Tag On Olsen Goes Up

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The price has gone up for defensive tackle Phil Olsen, the All-America from Utah State who started in the last eight games of the 1971 season for the Los Angeles Rams.

National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle Monday ordered the Rams to give the New England Patriots a third round draft choice as further compensation for Merlin Olsen's younger brother.

When the younger Olsen came to the Rams as a free agent from New England last summer his cost was a No. 1 draft choice.

"We are keenly disappointed with the commissioner's decision," said Ram president and general manager William A. Barnes. "However, so far as we are concerned, the matter is closed."

Phil Olsen was a No. 1 draft choice of New England in 1970 but sat out that season after knee surgery. He was declared a free agent when a legal flaw was discovered in his contract.

He was injured during the Rams' exhibition season, suffering torn knee ligaments but later returned to the club.

His brother, Merlin, is a 10-year All-Pro with the Rams.

THOSE MUTUAL FUNDS

Pleasant Year-End Chore

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — Mutual fund managers now are facing a pleasant chore — penning year-end reports to more than 10 million shareholders.

With few exceptions, the introductory letters — and the portfolio positions backing them up — will make good reading.

For the first time since 1968, fund managers can boast about "beating the averages" during a market upswing. In 1971 the typical mutual fund scored an 18 per cent appreciation in asset value per share — a huge improvement over 1970's 9 per cent drop.

Standard & Poor's 425 industrials — a broad market yard stick against which fund performance is often gauged — moved up 11.7 per cent. The blue chip Dow Jones industrial average, by comparison, advanced by only 6.1 per cent.

According to Arthur Lipper Corp., the industry's scorekeeper, relatively few funds performed badly. Of 526 funds of all types tracked by Lipper, less than 5 per cent failed to show some gains.

Fund managers hope the favorable figures will spark an upturn in lagging fund sales. During the spring and summer months, fund shareholders cashed in more shares than they purchased.

Although the sales picture has improved since September, fund men are worried that investors will again wait until the market is "all froth and bubbles" before buying heavily again.

This is what happened during the go-go era of 1967-68, when the performance craze brought the industry its biggest influx of new shareholders in a decade. Even with last year's gains, most of these newcomers are showing losses on their fund holdings.

During the three years ending with 1971, the typical mutual fund is down by 7 per cent, according to Lipper. Growth funds, which were clobbered during the market's 1969-70 sinking spell, fell almost 14 per cent over the same period.

A look at the five-year pull — a period many fund men insist is more proper in judging performance — tells a different tale.

The fundholder fortunate enough to participate in the 1967 bull market, has watched his investment climb by 46 per cent (assuming reinvestment of dividends and capital gains distributions). The Dow Jones industrial average, reflecting the sluggish earnings trend in manufacturing industries, rose by only 13 per cent over the same span.

Surprisingly, the heftiest gainers in 1971 were funds specializing in bank and insurance stocks. While they represent less than 1 per cent of the industry's $55 billion in assets, the bank and insurance funds climbed by 32.4 per cent. It was the second year in a row the traditionally slow-paced group outperformed the rest of the industry.

Growth funds, which lagged the rest of the industry in 1970, were sprightly performers once again.

With the bulk of their gains coming during the market's spring surge, growth funds posted a 19.8 per cent advance.

Unlike what happened in the late 1960s, the smaller and presumably more nimble growth funds didn't outshine their bigger brethren.

Among Lipper's top 50 funds— none of which gained less than 30 per cent — there's a healthy sprinkling of funds with assets of over $50 million. Most are run by the large fundmanagement companies, who have a broad array of investment talent and management skill.

As in 1970, it paid to be invested in income-oriented funds. Their stress on high-yielding issues didn't hurt in a market that wasn't ready for a speculative fling.

The average income fund gained 14.1 per cent, while at the same time providing an ample 5 per cent yield.

Growth funds, which ordinarily don't pick stocks according to dividend prospects, netted a yield of slightly more than 1 per cent.

Amusement Parks — A Lot Of Hard Work

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Carl Hughes frequently works 14 hours a day in the spring and summer as manager of the largest amusement park in the northeastern United States. When winter comes he puts in a "short day" — eight hours.

"Many people think we to take it wasy all winter," said Hughes who oversees operations at Kennywood Park near Pittsburgh. "But our winter activity is a full schedule. Maintenance crews inspect and repair the rides. There is new construction —we must come up with something new each season to keep the kids coming back.

"We must plan promotions, look for new business. For years Kennywood has specialized in school picnics."

Hughes said patrons visit amusement parks in three stages of their lives.

"We have them as kids from grade school through high school," Hughes said. "Then we lose them when they become too sophisticated. But a few years later they return to us as parents. There is another gap after their children grow up. But they come back as grandparents."

For 75 years children in the Pittsburgh area have been delighted with the wonders of Kennywood Park, located on a 140-acre tract.

Hughes is a vice president of the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions.

He noted several new amusement parks which opened recently.

"Miracle Mile in Los Angeles and Disneyworld in Florida opened last year and both are sensational," Hughes said. King's Island near Cincinnati will be ready for business this spring. Six Flags Park outside St. Louis has proged popular since it opened last year."

Most older amusement parks are in cities, but the trend has been toward suburban locations, Hughes said. Because of the high value of land many amusement parks went out of business. Closed in the last few years were Riverview Park in Chicago and Palisades Park in New Jersey. Realtors pay high prices for the land to develop needed homes.

Early Market Backtracks For Fifth Session

NEW YORK (UPI) —The stock market backtracked for the fifth consecutive session through the second hour today in fairly active trading.

The weakness generally was regarded as a consolidation of past market gains. Some analysts were heartened by the fact that market reacted calmly to the deficit budget unveiled by President Nixon Monday.

Popular market averages were off several points near noon while declines built up a commanding 842 to 364 margin over advances.

Among the most active Amex issues were Mammoth Mart, fractionally lower on more than 40,000 shares; Rath Packaging, down 3 on 40,000 shares, and Teleprompter, slightly higher on around 30,000 shares.

Levitz Furniture, which tumbled 9 1-4 points on the New York Exchange Monday, was delayed in opening by an influx of trading orders. After the market closed Monday, the NYSE ruled no member or member organization could accept stop orders on the issue until further notice.

Cereals stocks ranged to more than a point lower.

New Invention For Trucking Industry

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Have you heard of a new invention developed by Dynamics Corp. of America (NYSE) for the trucking industry? Is this stock an attractive speculation? I am a student seeking income. — Y.A.

A. This diversified manufacturer of electronic and electrical products has indeed developed an antihijacking device called the Routemaster. This device automatically disables a truck if it strays from a route programmed by a dispatcher. Recently, Dynamics Corp. stated that it was installing its newly developed equipment in commercially operated trucks.

While the Routemaster should attract wide interest among truck-fleet operators and so forth, at this point, stock is attractive for speculative investors only. Following two deficit periods, DCA posted a 1 cent-a-share profit for nine months ending in September, on an 18 per cent decline in sales. For you, seeking strictly income, Dynamics Corp. shares are not suited at all. The company pays no dividend and hasn't since August 1970.

Q. After attending an investment clinic held by a local brokerage firm I purchased 500 American Telephone warrants. I now have a loss in addition to margin costs. My other holdings include a balanced fund, utility bonds and common shares of a utility. I am retired and can ill afford a loss. What would you recommend my doing now? — D.C.

A. First and foremost I would hope that you have learned from this experience that even a modest speculation, such as telephone warrants, is ill-considered for a person in your financial position. Unless you can afford a loss you should invest only in conservative high-quality issues similar to the balance of your portfolio. Like thousands of small investors, you were lured by the irresistible promise of a fast profit to an unsuitable investment.

Fortunately for your pocketbook the market has turned and you now have sufficient capital gain to cover commissions and margin costs with some left over. Don't tempt fate again, get out while you're ahead and by all means close out your margin account.

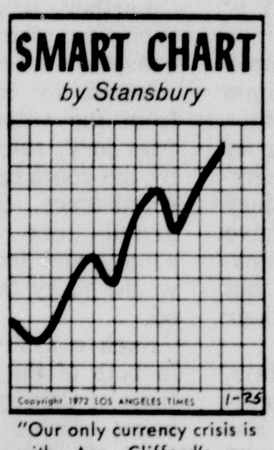
Sausalito Development Is Sold

The Marina Vista condominium development, located off Nevada Street, Sausalito, has been sold by Project Development Corp. for approximately $2.5 million.

The buyer was identified by general manager Victor M. Di Suvero as T I Properties Corp. of Los Angeles.

T I Propertes also holds 25 acres in Larkspur under option to the Golden Gate Bridge District for a ferry terminal.

The company will continue the construction and sales program at Marina Vista initiated by Project Development in 1970. When completed, it will contain 172 condominium units. Forty-six units are now built and under construction, Di Suvero said. Completion is scheduled in about 30 months and at that time will represent a total investment of more than $8 million.



"Our only currency crisis is with Ace Clifford's expense account."

Grand Jury Reform Up To Legislature

Grand juries, along with other components of our system of justice, have been under considerable attack recently. They have been assailed on various grounds, some of which reflect more ignorance by the attackers than shortcomings by the juries but some of which have validity.

Three Democratic assemblymen — Edwin L. Z'berg of Sacramento, John K. MacDonald of Ventura and Alister McAlister of San Jose — have introduced a bill (AB 70) which could eliminate some of the valid complaints.

IN CALIFORNIA, judges of the superior courts submit names for grand jury selection. The jurors are drawn from among these names. The jury then is impaneled for a year, with two duties: hearing criminal charges in felony cases to determine whether the accused shall be held for trial, and investigating all departments of county and local government.

The two functions are antipathetical, thus leading to some valid criticisms of the system.

To do an investigation of government that means anything calls for a grand jury made up of persons who have not only above-average background and/or education but also considerable time at their disposal.

A person accused of crime, however, is entitled to a hearing by a jury of his peers. For this reason, names for trial juries are drawn at random from the voting rolls. There is legitimacy in the contention that the same should apply to grand juries who hear the charges and decide whether or not to hold the accused for trial.

Moreover, the time devoted to hearing criminal charges eats into the time available to the grand jurors for their investigative function. This results in either (a) cursory hearings in criminal matters or (b) cursory investigation of government — perhaps both.

Grand juries themselves have recognized this difficulty. The 1971 San Francisco Grand Jury urged that the system be changed to provide two juries — one to consider criminal indictments and the other to be watchdog of government.

THIS IS PROPOSED in AB70. It would not require two grand juries in every county, and in some of the smaller ones they might not be needed. But it would empower the presiding judge of superior court to impanel two grand juries if he saw fit.

Further, it provides that in such case, the grand jurors to hear criminal charges would be selected by random drawing from the voter rolls, as is a trial jury, subject to interview by the court to determine their competence. Selection of the grand jury to investigate county and local governments would be by the present method.

Such a system should result in both of the dissimilar functions of California grand juries being carried out more effectively, and should eliminate much of the criticism of the system. It is a reform that deserves full attention by the Legislature.

Court Decision Leaves Districting Mess Unsolved

By RUS WALTON

The State Supreme Court's recent decision on the reapportionment mess is a mixed bag. Mostly worms.

The court held the legislature has the inherent power to redistrict itself. This may be constituionally correct, but it is certainly debatable on the grounds of conflict of interest.

One could wish the court had at least recognized that the inherent power to redistrict really resides with the people, not the legislature. The legislature acts only as an agent of the people. When the legislature fails to act, or acts improperly, the people can transfer their inherent powers to another agency.

That is what the people did, back in 1926. They amended the state constitution to create a reapportionment commission and gave it the power to act if the legislature goofed.

But the court, in a strange and strained decision based on a predetermined, partisan conclusion, ruled the commission unconstitutional.

NOT ALL IS BLACK, though. The court did refuse Sec. of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. his plea. Mr. Brown wanted the court to enforce the horrendous reapportionment plans spawned by Democratic Assemblyman Henry Waxman and State Sen. Mervyn Dymally. He called the plans "impeccable."

The justices called them "at best truncated products," and said "it would be far less destructive of the electoral process" to force the voters to exist under present district boundaries for another two years than to enforce those new lines.

So much for Mr. Brown and his "impecable" districts.

The court also held that a governor does, in fact, have the right to veto a reapportionment bill, just like any other bill. Which makes sense. If the legislature is to have the innate power to apportion itself, there should be some opportunity for check, and balance, or even stalemate.

THE COURT THEN decided it had the "innate" power to override a governor's veto. Which is just what it did on the new congressional districts.

To do otherwise, it held, would be to effectively deprive California of its five new seats in the U.S. House of Representatives. This would have caused five vacancies in Congress since those districts had already been "taken away" from other states, it said.

The most odious fact is that the court did nothing to prevent a recurrence of the reapportionment mess every 10 years. The legislature is left with a conflict of interest and the citizens are left to the tender mercies of partisan hacks and self-centered incumbents.

This is what Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was saying when he bitterly decried the court's decision.

REINECKE IS ALREADY feeling the hot breath of angry incumbents. Following the court's decision, the Senate Rules Committee advised Reinecke that — although he is president of the Senate — the services of its duplicating office and the facilities of the state printing plant would no longer be available to him.

But men such as Senators John Harmer and Fred Marler and Assemblyman Jerry Lewis, "new breed" legislators, have joined the fight for voter equity, along with Reinecke and Controller Houston Flournoy. They, too, seek creation of a non-partisan, non-legislative body to handle future reapportionment.

Such a clinical, impartial and equitable approach to redistricting — crucial to representative government — will require a constitutional amendment. That can be a difficult, costly and time-consuming process.

In the interests of good government, it would be well worth it.

Naming Of Juvenile In Arson Case Decried

In your reporting of the youths charged with setting fire to the San Rafael Courthouse you have shown your restricted outlook for the future for these juveniles. The purpose of Judge Wilson to withhold the juveniles names was completely neglected by you. Even though you are in the business of reporting the news, do you think it is necessary to report the names of the juveniles? The results of your neglect may not be seen in the immediate future but, in the long run will harm the individual with irreparable damage. If the police are unable to release these names then it seems absurd for you to do so. I hope this outrageous policy will be discontinued.

Description of Queen Upsets Danes Here

Several of the residents in Aldersly are extremely upset over your article in your paper last week regarding Queen Margrethe of Denmark. You stated that she is on the hefty side. I am sorry to inform you that you are wrong. She is 5 foot 10, slender and a very charming lady. I am sure no one in Denmark ever called her "the cow." They honor and respect the royal family.

Facts Don't Bear Out Statement On Unions

It seems that Mr. Molarsky's letter (I.-J., Jan. 18) would state as a fact that "a bad union for a particular industry is better for the workers and their country than no union at all." That's my interpretation.

The sweeping statement about the omnipotent good that unions have done and are doing for the U.S., Mr. Molansky, won't hold up if you look at the record of the past 10 years.

Mr. Average Citizen is fed up with strikes and their attendant delays in goods and services. What has happened to Great Britain and their unions is happening here. Yes, unions honestly and fairly run, are necessary to modern industrial life, but too many unions today have become power mad in the pursuit of "getting theirs" - and to h–l with others. Is that what he would call "sharing in the economic benefits of our American way of life"?

World Peace Park For Courthouse Square

I would like to compliment the San Rafael City Council and all those who worked on the project, on their promptness and efficiency in making the courthouse square attractive, presentable and usable during the month of December and especially at Christmastime. It looked as if an awful lot of people worked awfully hard to achieve this.

I would like to suggest that this property be made into a beautiful park and dedicated to world peace. When talks resume, maybe, this could be kept in mind. Maybe the supervisors could donate the property to the city (a benevolent gesture) and money allocated to our parks system be used to make a park. Sounds simple! It just might work.

Districts' Merger Might Reduce Taxes

One of the questions facing candidates in the forthcoming Sausalito School Board election is whether annexation of the Sausalito district by Mill Valley would result in higher taxes for the Sausalito property owner. The present board maintains it would. I, for one, contend that it should not.

It is difficult enough for even a school board member to follow the intricacies of an established district's budget. To predict precisely at this time the budget of merged districts is impossible. Typical questions which would have to be answered before even a preliminary budget could be prepared (and taxes estimated) are:

What would be the average classroom size in the district?

What Sausalito teachers would become part of the new system, and at what salary levels?

Could Mill Valley's favorable administrator-to-pupil level be retained?

While precision is beyond us at this point, some simple assumptions make it possible to see what a merger of districts could accomplish. I believe the following tabulation demonstrates this:

Assessed valuation: Mill Valley $85.9 million, Sausalito $38.3 million, combined $124.2. Average daily attendance: Mill Valley 3,538, Sausalito 500, combined 4,038. Budgets: (total) Mill Valley $3.45 million, Sausalito $1.17 million, combined $4.04 million; (per a.d.a.) Mill Valley $975, Sausalito $2,340, combined $1,000. Tax incomes needed: (general purpose) Mill Valley $1,030,000, Sausalito $595,000, combined $1,205,000; (overrides) Mill Valley $744,000, Sausalito $83,000, combined $870,000. Total tax rates: Mill Valley $3.46, Sausalito $2.995, combined $2.965.

The key assumption in these figures of course is that the cost per child per year in the new District would be little more than what it is currently in Mill Valley.

This results in savings of more than half a million dollars, which for Sausalito offsets its high assessed evaluation and the added bonded indebtedness.

Much-Used Conspiracy Charge Will Pose Test For New Court

WASHINGTON — The most profound change President Nixon has worked in his three years in office is on the Supreme Court of the United States. Four Nixon appointees now sit on the high tribunal and, with the conservative direction of John F. Kennedy's only legacy, Justice Byron White, the court is a different institution.

The new court — the strict constructionist court — will receive in the next year or year and a half a succession of appeals in cases involving fundamental rights of the individual and the guarantees of freedom in the constitutional rights. Many cases will have political and sociological overtones hardly subject to strict interpretation of the law. In the court of the past, the Warren court, these extra-legal considerations were taken into account and the highest judicial body was regarded as a last resort of freedom.

ANGELA DAVIS, Daniel Ellsberg of the Pentagon Papers, along with many others are likely to have their appeals before the new court. More far reaching are the number of conspiracy cases now being pushed in one federal grand jury after another around the country. Guy Goodwin, chief of the litigation section of internal security in the Department of Justice, is zealously promoting in the federal courts the charge of conspiracy.

The acts of violence in recent years must be part of a conspiracy — that is the conviction behind the department's effort to throw a net around the radicals of the New Left. The fear of civil libertarians is that in the secret proceedings of the grand jury chamber, where witnesses are without the protection of an attorney and where they may be cited for contempt and jailed for refusing to answer the district attorney's questions, the narrow line between overt acts and spoken dissent will break down.

When there is any doubt of conviction for an overt act, throw in the conspiracy charge, that seems to be the rule. It is what happened in the Ellsberg case, with the government adding conspiracy to the list of criminag charges in a 15-count indictment in Los Angeles.

The tent of conspiracy was thrown over an even more dramatic and consequential case. Rev. Philip Berrigan, a Catholic priest, and six other antiwar dissidents are going on trial at Harrisburg, Pa., charged with conspiracy to harass the Selective Service system and with conspiracy to blow up the heating system of the capitol in Washington and kidnap Henry A. Kissinger, the president's adviser on national security. Father Berrigan and two new defendants were already in prison for destroying draft records and the new indictment would seem to insure a second conviction for virtually the same offense.

THE CASE of the Berrigan brothers and their co-conspirator, Sister Elizabeth McAllister, a Catholic nun, has all the disturbing elements of a time of turbulence bordering on revolution. The judicial process will be challenged from top to bottom to show they have had a fair trial in the context of the guarantees protecting the individual in the Constitution.

Was the plot to blow up the heating plants and kidnap Kissinger merely fantasizing? How could these religious pacifists hope to muster the strength — they estimated it would require six or seven men —to kidnap the President's aide who is under constant Secret Service protection? And if it was a fantasy, a kind of wishful dream, was there any overt and illegal act that could convict all seven as conspirators?

Repeated illegal acts have been committed by antiwar dissidents. Government property has been burned. Father Philip deliberately and publicly with others destroyed draft records at Catonsville, Md.

How to separate these illegal acts from the right of dissent is the puzzle the courts must try to resolve. By throwing the tent of conspiracy over as many as a dozen cases, with prosecution before grand juries taking on the character of star-chamber proceedings, the Department of Justice has made the untangling of the puzzle far more difficult.

Eventually most of these cases will go before the new court to unravel. This will be a test of strict construction and the capacity of the Supreme Court to see beyond mere legalism. The nine black-robed judges might ponder the words of the late Justice Robert H. Jackson: "The modern crime of conspiracy is so vague that it almost defies definition." That is the challenge.

Vietnam Should Remain Issue In Sense Of Policy Lesson

President Nixon says Vietnam will not be an issue in the presidential campaign; Senator Kennedy says it will. In a sense both are right.

The President believes that the continuing withdrawing of American troops, the virtual cessation of casualties, and very possibly much more — including an agreement leading to the release of the American prisoners — will remove the war from American controversy.

Perhaps events will work out this way. But even if they do, as we all may well hope, there is a sense in which Vietnam ought to be an issue. Americans should ask themselves: what did we do wrong, what did our leaders do wrong, and what should we all learn from this terrible experience?

IT WOULD BE FOUND that political blame falls to both parties, perhaps more to the Democrats than to the Republicans. President Eiwenhower kept the United States out of heavy Vietnam involvement in the 1950s, although Vice President Nixon was on the hawk side at that time. Presidents Kennedy and Johnson took the United States into massive participation.

President Nixon inherited the war, and has found disengagement protracted and costly, in American and Vietnamese lives and resources. It is now "his war" and he will certainly be attacked for it by his opponents during the campaign. But the leading Democratic candidates, Senators Muskie and Humphrey, do not have anything like clean hands. Both had to support the Johnson position in 1968 and it hurt them. They now plead a change of mind and heart.

Senators McCarthy and McGovern, the Democratic doves, have urged complete pull-out from Vietnam for years. They are not presently running very well in the polls. Americans seem to have an instinctive feeling that the situation was not all that simple: that withdrawal had to be on some kind of negotiated terms rather than abject departure.

It would be immensely refreshing and healing if the mistakes of the past, including the recent past, could be analyzed and admitted. The trouble with most politicans and public figures is that they are too defensive. In this, I believe, they make another great mistake. Admission of error strengthens credibility as little else can do.

IT ISN't NECESSARY to beat our heads against a national wailing wall. The question is not one of mass guilt. It is one of learning better for the future. The analysis should go farther than Vietnam. It should encompass, as Senator Fulbright has recently done in the New Yorker magazine, a review of the entire cold war period.

Revisionism can, of course, go too far. The Truman policies were directed against a genuine threat in Stalinism. But it is beginning to be agreed that the cold warriors linked Russia and China too closely for too long, that they failed to respond adequately to Khrushchev's overtures, and that they largely misunderstood what had been happening in Asia.

The United States will not get the poison of Vietnam out of its system until it does understand where and how it went wrong. The nation must perceive how easy it is to slide down a slippery slope, perhaps without any single conscious decision being tell-tale.

THERE IS ALREADY a good deal of self-searching going on in the United States. Much of this relates to the personal and national goals of growth, materialism, affluence: the consumerist society. These goals are being revised, perhaps not drastically enough yet to restore environmentjl sobriety and individual peace of mind.

Here, too, the nation is recognizing past mistakes and beginning to try to learn from them.

A presidential year is a hard time for the "ins" to admit mistakes, and the "outs" were too recently involved —and too involved by their control of Congress — to escape the same difficulty. An end to boastful rhetoric, all the same, would strike very responsive chords.

Why Take Trip To Peking When We Need A Good Cigar?

WASHINGTON — Not everyone is thrilled with President Nixon's visit to China next month. My friend MacGonnacky believes Mr. Nixon should go to Havana first.

"The way I see it," MacGonnacky said, "the President is going to a Communist country 4,000 miles away when it would be much easier for him, if he really wants to see a Communist country, to hop over from Key Biscayne to Cuba in a helicopter. It would save this country an awful lot of money."

"THE PRESIDENT isn't going to the People's Republic of China just to see it. He has urgent business to discuss with Mao Tse-tung."

"That's another thing. How come we still refer to Castro's country as Communist Cuba and we now call Mao's country the People's Republic of China?"

"Because," I explained patiently, "we're trying to build bridges between Red... oops... the People's Republic of China and the United States."

"Why aren't we trying to build any bridges between Cuba and the United States?"

"Because Cuba is an outlaw, and it's exporting revolution around the world."

"What's the People's... oops... Red China doing?" MacGonnacky asked.

"China, though we may not agree with its philosophy, is a major power, and it's better to talk with them than eventually to fight them."

"ARE YOU SAYING then that since Cuba is not a major power, it's better to fight them than to talk with them?"

"I'm not saying that at all. But you must remember that Cuba is a constant threat to us."

"I thought everyone agreed before Nixon announced his visit that China was the biggest threat to us."

"It was before, but now that President Nixon is going there, it's not as big a threat as it was before."

"Who are the biggest threats to the United States right now?" MacGonnacky demanded.

"Cuba, the Soviet Union and India."

"WELL, IF CHINA is no longer a threat to us, why are we still building the ABM system to defend us against their missiles?"

"Because Canada is mad at us, and as long as we started building it we might as well finish it in case Trudeau gets any funny ideas."

MacGonnacky couldn't be convinced. "I still think Nixon should go to Cuba first and then work his way up to China. If e makes some gaffes negotiating with a Communist country, it might as well be a little one rather than a big one."

"It's too late," I said. Nixon has his heart set on going to China. Besides, he'll get a lot more TV coverage going to Peking than he would if he went to Havana."

"Look, I don't care if Nixon wants to go to Peking, but it seems to me that it would be much more beneficial if he built a bridge to Cuba first. This country has done without Havana cigars for 10 years. What has China to offer us that we can't get now in this country?"

"Cheap labor," I said. "If we can come to terms with Mao Tse-tung we could have 800 million people working for us, and we wouldn't have to work at all. Isn't that better than vintage Havanas?"

"I may be selfish," MacGonnacky said. "But I'd give up Nixon's trip to Peking for one good box of Montecristo cigars any day."

Dock Strike Talk Optimism Shown

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Both shippers and striking longshoremen say negotiations could resume at any time over remaining issues in the West Coast dock strike.

Federal mediators worked to get both sides together today while Congress considered bills to end the walkout against 24 Pacific ports.

A Pacific Maritime Association spokesman said talks could resume "at the drop of a hat." International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union sources said they could be prepared to talk "within hours."

Last week, ILWU President Harry Bridges said that talks could begin again by Jan. 31 or possibly sooner, following discussions with various union officials.

In Washington, D.C., Rep. Spark M. Matsunaga of Hawaii Monday asked Congress to ditch President Nixon's emergency call for compulsory arbitration to end the walkout. He said both sides should be given more time to seek a solution.

Major issues to be resolved was the granting of wages and benefits retroactive to last November and the financing of $5.2 million for a guaranteed annual wage.

Matsunaga's bill called for a back to work order with an allowance of 30 more days for the ILWU and PMA to seek a settlement. If they fail to reach agreement, his bill calls for a "last best offer" selection by a three member panel.

The panel would weigh the last offers of both sides and select the most reasonable, a type of solution advanced in other legislation by the Nixon Administration.

Big Land Firm Hit By Contempt Action

MARTINEZ (UPI)—The district attorney's office has filed a contempt proceeding against Boise-Cascade Corp., contending the land firm's salesmen violated a court order against misleading claims for a recreational subdivision.

Judge Robert Cooney set a hearing on the action for Feb. 18 in Contra Costa County Superior Court.

Sam Mesnick, assistant district attorney who filed the action, said Monday the salesmen had been making misleading statements about a subdivision called Pine Mountain Lake in Tuolumne County.

Detectives found salesmen made misstatements about the conversion of State Highway 120 into a freeway and about a salesman owning land in the tract, Mesnick declared.

Investigation showed, he said, that the State Division of Highways has reported money for the conversion will not be available until at least 1982.

Detectives also found that a salesman did not own land in the tract although he said he did, Mesnick continued.

Judge Cooney on Oct. 12 signed a temporary order restricting Boise-Cascade statements. The order was sought by William H. O'Malley, the district attorney, and by California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger.

O'Malley and Younger's request came after their offices filed suit accusing Boise-Cascade and three subsidiaries with making "false and misleading representations" in the sale of property in four Calaveras County subdivisions.

Dimes Fund Picking Up

The Marin March of Dimes, more than midway in its annual month-long campaign, had collected $11,105 as of yesterday, said Harry J. Moore, campaign coordinator.

The amount is approximately $2,000 more than was collected last year at the same time, he said, and does not include contributions made to the Mothers' March on Birth Defects held over the weekend.

The March of Dimes does not have a goal, but last year collected approximately $31,000 in Marin County, Moore said.

In Marin, the funds support the Genetic Counseling and Evaluation Clinic at Ross General Hospital, supply special medical equipment for local hospitals and provide equipment and training materials for local programs for birth defected children.

In 1971, some 7,199,469 cars crossed the bridge, compared with 6,593,707 in 1970.
